MEMBERS of the Legislative Assembly and their staff should be required by law to report observed or suspected child abuse or exploitation, the association representing police officers says.

Australian Federal Police Association president Alex Caruana called for changes to child protection laws in the ACT to expand requirements to include Assembly members and staff as mandated reporters.

Mr Caruana's call follows the resignation of the Greens' Johnathan Davis after an internal party review into allegations Mr Davis had sex with a minor and an inappropriate, but not illegal, relationship with a 17-year-old.

Mr Davis resigned from the Legislative Assembly and his party late on Sunday night, and has declined to comment, through a lawyer, on allegations put to him.

The party referred the issues to police on Friday, but no formal complaint has been made. Greens leader Shane Rattenbury has acknowledged a young person raised concerns with the party about the potential illegal sharing of explicit images.

On this day in 1993, a rare world record attempt was celebrated - parachuting with the biggest flag attached. Keith Miller broke the record over Lake Burley Griffin and, despite the huge drag factor of the flag, managed to land on target. A 418 square metre Australian flag was attached to Mr Miller while his partner, who also hit his target, dragged a 232 square metre Government Employees Health Fund flag. To put those things into perspective consider that the Australian flag about Parliament House is only 82 square metres. Visit: <https://trove.nla.gov.au/newspaper/page/13973990>

Hannah Neale

A JUDGE has refused an application for the case of a military whistleblower to go to an appeal, despite claims from the man's lawyer the issue was of "real significance".

The ACT Supreme Court jury trial of former military lawyer David McBride is scheduled to begin on Monday.

McBride faces five charges relating to the theft and disclosure of classified documents to journalists, which detailed alleged misconduct by Australian troops in Afghanistan.

In court on Thursday, Justice David Mossop said he would not direct jurors that an oath of allegiance to the sovereign, sworn by McBride as a member of the military, meant his duty extended to acting in the Australian public interest even when in contravention of a lawful order.

In a separate courtroom, in the ACT Court of Appeal, lawyers for McBride applied to be given leave to appeal this decision, and stay the trial until this was determined.

Chief Justice Lucy McCallum denied the appeal and stay application, saying "it is not apparent to me that Justice Mossop's ruling is likely to be set aside".

"I am not persuaded that there is sufficient gap in his honour's decisions ... to warrant interrupting the trial," Chief Justice McCallum said.

"It would be preferable that any appeal be determined by established facts and evidence rather than a hypothetical statutory vacuum."

Counsel for McBride, Stephen Odgers SC, said the issue of duty had "real significance" for the defence case.

"He seeks an opportunity to have that critical issue dealt with in the Court of Appeal," Mr Odgers said.

McBride has pleaded not guilty and was originally set to face the start of his trial on Thursday, however, it has been pushed back to Monday.

The case is set to return to the ACT Supreme Court on Friday.

Tim Piccione

A SERIAL family violence offender has been refused conditional release due to the risk he posed to his partner and newborn baby.

"I consider the risk [the offender] presents to [the victim] and to the baby as too significant," magistrate Jane Campbell said on Tuesday.

The court heard the man, who is not named to protect the victim's identity, had committed 17 family violence offences against his partner "in recent times".

The 21-year-old offender has previously pleaded guilty to contravening a family violence order and escaping from arrest.

He has been convicted seven times this year of contravening a family violence order against the same victim.

In September, the man became aggressive towards his partner in front of a therapy case worker assigned to her.

The offender grabbed her by the shirt to stop her from leaving.

Constituting a breach of his family violence order, bail conditions and intensive correction order conditions, he threatened: "I'm going to make sure the baby is taken off you. I hope you and the baby dies."

Prosecutor Jack Hill told the court Child and Youth Protection Services feared for the woman and child's safeties. The child's birth, Mr Hill said, "shifts the risk landscape".

Despite hearing that the victim had limited support outside the offender, the magistrate refused the bail application.

Canberra's first checkout-free shop opens at CIT

Natalie Vikhrov

STUDY snacking has been made easier for students at the Canberra Institute of Technology with the opening of the first checkout-free tech in an educational institution in the Southern Hemisphere.

The Canberra Institute of Technology Student Association officially launched its new store on Thursday, where shoppers can walk in by scanning their bank card or mobile wallet, pick up their food and drink and leave.

The facility has been fitted out with Amazon's "just walk out" technology, which uses "artificial intelligence-like computer vision" and machine learning algorithms to determine what consumers have taken from the shop and then charges their card for the items.

CIT Student Association chief executive Andrew Scotford said the association identified this as one of the things that would improve the student experience, as well as that of staff and campus visitors.

"Many CIT students are balancing work, study and training, so flexibility and accessibility are important to them," he said. Mr Scotford said staffing hospitality locations had been a challenge post-COVIDlockdown, "so this helps us address that".

"This was a place that we couldn't find a way to staff a service for and now we can provide that service," he said.

Mr Scotford said the technology in the store had no facial recognition but instead created a "digital avatar" for the customer.

The shop gives students the option to grab food, beverages and essentials while they study late or take night courses, when other shops may be closed. CITSA council chair Lelio Laschkolnig said before the launch of facilities like this, he would have to interrupt his study and go home if he got hungry.

Amazon Web Services head of modernisation in Australia and New Zealand Craig Lawton said the Just Walk Out technology has been deployed to 200 locations around the world, including the Marvel Stadium in Melbourne.

The CIT Bruce Campus YalaPlus store is open to the public, with the checkout-free technology to be further rolled out at two more sites on CIT campuses in Bruce and Fyshwick.

Rabbit purge set for City Hill

The ACT government will tackle the plague of rabbits on City Hill.

From next Monday, gas and air gun pellets will be used to try to bring the population in the centre of Canberra down. The operation will be mostly done at night and is expected to last for at least 10 days. "The ACT government undertakes rabbit control to protect the ACT's environment values, primary production and urban landscapes," the government's manager for City Presentation, Daniel Iglesias, said. He said that rabbits were an officially designated "pest". Control operations were "designed to maintain rabbit populations below a density where they can cause significant harm to the environment or to other assets". They have damaged the pine trees on City Hill. The official said the rabbits were also a hazard to drivers who sometimes swerved to avoid them.

HEALTH Two in five people are overdue operations, minister says

Lanie Tindale

TWO-IN-FIVE Canberra patients waiting for urology surgeries are overdue, the Health Minister says.

Rachel Stephen-Smith said the long waiting list for urology operations was caused by a fire at North Canberra Hospital, then known as Calvary Public, in December 2022.

As of October 16, there were 572 patients waiting for urology surgery in the ACT, with 230 overdue.

Of those, 466 were to have surgery at North Canberra Hospital, 80 at Canberra Hospital, and 26 through territory-wide surgical services.

Urology refers to the treatment of the kidneys, bladder, prostate and male reproductive organs.

About 80 per cent of the ACT's urology operations are performed at North Canberra Hospital, Ms Stephen-Smith said.

That was very significantly disrupted by the theatre fires and the loss of some vital equipment.

Rachel Stephen-Smith

"It's around 2000 cases a year normally. And so that was very significantly disrupted by the theatre fires and the loss of some vital equipment, which has obviously now been replaced and the theatres are now open," she said.

"Normal services are resuming and North Canberra Hospital will be getting through that."

More than 2000 patients waited longer for surgery than clinically recommended in the 2022-23 financial year.

The ACT government set its own targets for elective surgery waitlists. An elective surgery is any that is not an emergency.

They aimed to deliver more than 14,800 elective surgeries in the 2022-23 financial year, and delivered 12,629.

The minister has previously said elective surgery wait-times were impacted by the operating theatre fires.

ECONOMY Unemployment rate edges higher in move tipped to impact wages growth

Adrian Rollins

Economics correspondent

THE jobless rate has bounced back up to 3.7 per cent and growth in number of hours people are working has slowed, in signs the labour market is beginning to lose momentum.

While 55,000 jobs were added in October, the Australian Bureau of Statistics reported that an additional 27,900 people became unemployed last month as more joined the labour force. The participation rose to a record-equalling 67 per cent.

Of the jobs created, the majority (37,900) were part-time, continuing a recent trend. Commonwealth Bank economist Stephen Wu said that in the past four months part-time employment has grown by 3.9 per cent while full-time work has shrunk by 0.3 per cent over the same period.

October's employment growth is likely to have been driven in part by the hiring of thousands of workers to help run the Voice to Parliament referendum, Mr Wu said, and "some payback" was expected in the November jobs numbers.

But Westpac economist Ryan Wells there was not enough information available to tell if the referendum had delivered a significant employment boost; experience from previous polls suggested the effect was limited.

In further evidence that the demand for workers is easing, the underutilisation rate - which includes the unemployed and those with a job who want to work more hours - increased marginally to 10 per cent, up 0.7 of a percentage point from the same period last year.

Treasury and the Reserve Bank of Australia have forecast the unemployment will rise as the economy slows under pressure from inflation and high interest rates.

But the RBA has trimmed its expectations and predicts the jobless rate will top out at 4.3 per cent in 2025, rather than 4.5 per cent.

As unemployment edges higher the rate of wages growth is predicted to slow.

Wages surged 1.3 per cent in the September quarter, underpinned to a large extent by significant increases in the minimum wage and higher pay for workers in health and aged care.

The RBA expects the wage price index, currently growing at an annual rate of 4 per cent, to stay at this level until mid-next year before slowing to 3.7 per cent by late 2024 and dropping to 3.5 per cent at the end of 2025.

Despite the solid pick up in wages, workers have seen their purchasing power falling because of high inflation.

Living costs are rising by more than 5 per cent, meaning that wages are declining in real terms, and they are not expected to begin overtaking increases in living costs until well into next year.

The Reserve Bank reckons pay gains will start to outpace inflation by mid-2024.

BDO Economics partner Anders Magnusson said there were signs that the labour market was loosening but the nation's big intake of migrants was not only increasing the supply of workers but also adding to demand.

He said the fact that the employment to population ratio has held steady proved the market was able to absorb the influx of workers.

Mr Caruana said it was reasonable to include Assembly members and staff in the same category as existing mandatory reporters, such as doctors, midwives, teachers, police officers and ministers of religion.

"Given recent media coverage, I think there needs to be an expansion to the mandated reporter criteria. In the course of their duties, members of the Legislative Assembly and their staff may receive information that should be reported to the appropriate authorities in order to protect children and young people in the ACT," Mr Caruana said.

"We welcome the recent commentary announcing an independent inquiry into the handling of the Davis allegations and further support the comments from the Speaker of the ACT Legislative Assembly, Joy Burch MLA, about reviewing the provisions of mandatory reporting legislation."

Mr Caruana said members of the Assembly and their staff were not the right people to make enquiries if they are made aware of an allegation of child abuse or exploitation.

"It must be mandatorily reported to the authorities, such as ACT Policing and Child and Youth Protection Services. Let the experts do their job," he said.

"We recommend including members of the Legislative Assembly and their staff in section 356 of the Children and Young People Act. This should clear up any ambiguity regarding the reporting of child abuse and exploitation in the ACT."

Deputy Chief Minister Yvette Berry announced on Tuesday that an independent inquiry will examine the handling of the allegations made against Mr Davis.

Ms Berry said the government intended to set up an inquiry with bipartisan support and clear and concise terms of reference.

Sally Pryor

THEY say that if you can get paid doing what you love, you'll never work a day in your life.

And the same goes, or went, for the dozens of photographers who were employed by the Australian government between 1939 and 1996 to capture Australian culture, people, landscapes and animals.

Tasked with documenting the visual heritage of Australia, these artists often had days every bit as exciting as a news photographer, with briefs as varied as aerial sunset shots, national parks, diplomatic ceremonies and average shopping centres.

The National Archives of Australia in Canberra holds nearly 11 million of these images, a tiny fraction of which are featured in a new exhibition.

Curator Emily Catt said sifting through the images had been a vast project that had opened her eyes to both the breadth of the archive's collection, and the types of people who had been employed as government photographers over the years.

"These are skilled people who have found a way to be employed to do what they love, and I think that's something that really, really comes through in these photographs," she said.

"They took great and impactful photographs, sometimes of things people weren't looking at, or not everyone had access to - factory floors, for example, or parts of rural Australia."

Many of the photographers - the majority of them men - were hired on government contracts, while others worked as freelancers, but some of their images ended up in the vast archives collection.

Ms Catt said the photographs were used by the media sections of various departments, to illustrate government activities, highlight aspects of Australian life, or even as stock images for books or pamphlets.

"When we think about looking for an image now, you'd go on Google and search for what you're after," she said.

"But at this point in time, how do you get photographs of things? People would write to the news and information bureau and say, 'I'm delivering an essay or I'm writing a book or I'm putting together a pamphlet and ask, do you have photographs of Australian people in Sydney? Do you have photographs of Australian industry? Do you have photographs of beach scenes?"

In putting together the show, Ms Catt selected 18 photographers, with biographical details that give a closer look at their lives and work.

"I would love for people to come in and have an appreciation of what we hold, and just see some of themselves in the collection," she said.

Among those featured is Jocelyn Burt, a photographer in the 1970s who wrote about how resistant men were at the time to accepting her work.

"She ended up publishing a number of books, and the government then acquired her photos so we have lots and lots of Jocelyn Burt photographs in the collection," she says.

"Her books ended up being so popular and they offered this different perspective."

Elections ACT

Notice of casual vacancy in the ACT Legislative Assembly

As a result of the resignation of Mr Johnathan Davis MLA, Member for Brindabella, there is a casual vacancy in the ACT Legislative Assembly.

Any person who was an unsuccessful candidate for the electorate of Brindabella in the 2020 ACT Legislative Assembly election may apply to contest this vacancy in accordance with section 192 of the Electoral Act 1992.

Application forms are available from the ACT Electoral Commission, Nara Centre, 3 Constitution Avenue, Canberra City between the hours of 9:00 am and 5:00 pm on weekdays, or may be obtained by contacting the Commission on 6205 0033 or at elections@act.gov.au.

Completed applications must reach the ACT Electoral Commissioner by noon on 27 November 2023.

Applicants are strongly encouraged to submit their application via email or in person. The names of the candidates who have applied to contest the vacancy will be publicly declared at 12:30 pm on 27 November 2023 at the ACT Legislative Assembly, under appropriate COVID Safe provisions. If more than one candidate applies to contest the vacancy, a recount of the votes received by Mr Johnathan Davis at the 2020 election will be conducted immediately after the declaration of candidates at the ACT Legislative Assembly, in order to determine the successful candidate.

Authorised by Damian Cantwell AM CSC, ACT Electoral Commissioner, Nara Centre, 3 Constitution Avenue, Canberra City.

Seselja's Senate push: Pulp Fiction or bland ambition?

MARK KENNY

Zippering Zed's defection across state lines is a bit of a blow to his former supporters.

"WHOSE chopper (Senate spot) is this?"

"It's Zed's."

"Who's Zed?"

"Zed's dead, baby."

Perhaps this is what Zed Seselja has concluded also? That is, that his chances of re-entering Parliament via his former Senate seat in the ACT are no more.

Chalk that up to David Pocock, the Bruce Willis of the red chamber (based largely on his haircut, admittedly), who has ridden off on Seselja's once reliable conveyance - grand theft moto.

How? By actually reflecting the mainstream liberalism of ACT voters on matters like voluntary assisted dying, same-sex marriage, environmental reform, and more. Pocock is less animated by say, "woke indoctrination" and the "left wing bias of the ABC". Representation rather than culture wars is an old trick but it works.

Still, zippering Zed's defection across state lines is a bit of a blow to his former supporters who had taken him to be steeped in the capital through thick and thin.

Thick and thin, by-the-way, is a reasonable description of his endorsements heading into a crucial NSW Liberal Party vote to fill the casual vacancy of Marise Payne.

The country's least energetic Women's Minister after Tony Abbott [cough] could be replaced by someone more in tune with Abbott in every respect. But don't take my word for it. Take Tony's.

He is one of a roll call of conservative hardliners lining up to back the dumped Canberran.

It's a heroic call when you look at it through their end of the binoculars. Out of eight-plus million people, they recommend going outside the state to find an adequate representative. Even then, the name they come up with has been freshly rejected by voters at the start of this very parliamentary term.

To be fair, Seselja's swimming with the real sharks now, having convinced not just the aforementioned ex-PM, but Opposition Leader Peter Dutton and a slew of Coalition luminaries like Matt Canavan, Angus Taylor, Jacinta Nampijinpa Price and Andrew Hastie.

Of course, there's support and there's support. Or, to put it another way, there's members of the NSW Liberal Party - say Taylor and Abbott - and then there's Dutton, Hastie, Canavan and Nampijinpa Price, who are not.

Still, nobody will mind the intrusion in Sydney I'm sure.

The whole thing of outsiders rolling in and taking all the best spots is what made the premier state what it is.

And you don't hear too many in the party's NSW Division apologising for that.

'Is he a comedian or a singer?'

Steve Evans

IT IS fair to say the good town of Queanbeyan was not overwhelmed by grateful citizens throwing their hats in the air at the possibility of a new neighbour and a new senator. "Is he a comedian or a singer?" Carol Hogan asked as she walked through the Riverside Plaza towards Coles.

She was one of a string of "never-heard-of-hims" on Thursday afternoon, shortly after Zed Seselja's video shot nearby surfaced on YouTube.

I moved from Canberra to Queanbeyan and now he's following me.

Dave O'Neill

"I have heard of him," Kyle Abell said as he pushed his child around the playground roundabout.

"But not much," he added. To be fair to the fugitive from Canberra, some Queanbeyans had heard of him and knew quite a lot about his background.

But that didn't necessarily do the former ACT senator a mountain of good. "Zed is on the far right so I'm not a fan," Dave O'Neill said.

"I moved from Canberra to Queanbeyan and now he's following me. I just don't like his politics. I don't think he did that much for the ACT."

Mr O'Neill wasn't surprised former prime minister and current luminary of the right, Tony Abbott, had endorsed Mr Seselja in the promo video. Mr O'Neill took against Mr Seselja because of what he saw as the brutal way he replaced the previous ACT senator, Gary Humphries, who was a member of the Senate from 2003 to 2013 (and also chief minister of the ACT from 2000 to 2001).

Mr Humphries himself wouldn't comment on Mr Seselja's candidacy in NSW when The Canberra Times asked him about it on Thursday.

But when there was talk of Mr Seselja wanting to return to the Senate for the ACT,

Albanese welcomes China-US talks on 'guardrails'

Paul Osborne

AUSTRALIA has welcomed talks between the Chinese and US presidents to ensure "guardrails" are in place to avoid conflict in the region.

Anthony Albanese landed in San Francisco on Thursday for the APEC leaders' summit, where a meeting between Joe Biden and Xi Jinping took centre stage.

"We need guardrails to make sure that we don't have misunderstandings or miscalculations that could lead to real issues and real conflict," the Prime Minister told reporters.

"As President Biden has said, it is crucial that strategic competition does not veer into conflict."

Having recently met with Mr Xi and Mr Biden in Beijing and Washington, Mr Albanese said the US-China meeting itself was a step forward.

The Prime Minister faced opposition criticism for attending the summit while domestic issues required his focus. But he said the trip was important because partners in the Asia-Pacific Economic Co-operation forum made up about 75 per cent of Australia's total trade in goods and services.

After a meeting with Microsoft chief executive Satya Nadella, Mr Albanese announced a six-month trial of generative artificial intelligence using Microsoft 365 Copilot.

The Digital Transformation Agency will evaluate the trial, with Microsoft providing training, onboarding and implementation assistance with participating agencies.

"By strengthening our partnership with Microsoft, we are charting a course for the future of the public service - one where generative AI is used responsibly to enhance the work of the APS (Australian Public Service) in delivering for Australians without compromising on safety," Mr Albanese said.

He is keen to discuss environmental and sustainability issues with other leaders, including how to collaborate to cut emissions and make the transition to renewable energy.

The first day included a welcome reception at San Francisco's Exploratorium Museum, along with Mr Biden and Vice-President Kamala Harris.

Mr Albanese plans to meet with leaders from Thailand, Canada, Papua New Guinea, Japan and Indonesia as well as China and the United States while he is in San Francisco.

Security and opening communication channels were key themes of the meeting between Mr Biden and Mr Xi.

"Planet Earth is big enough for the two countries to succeed," Mr Xi told Mr Biden.

The US President said: "I think it's paramount that you and I understand each other clearly, leader to leader, with no misconceptions or miscommunications."

The presidents and their aides on trade, the economy, national security and regional diplomacy gathered across from one another at a single long table, the culmination of negotiations between the two leaders' top aides over the past several months.

Dave O'Neill, inset, is not a fan of former ACT senator Zed Seselja, who is now trying to win a NSW Senate seat. Pictures by Karleen Minney, Steve Evans

Mr Humphries said it would be a "profoundly foolish thing" as he has a "unique ability to lose, not win hearts and minds".

Talking to voters in Queanbeyan on Thursday afternoon, it was clear Mr Seselja is a deeply divisive politician.

He has his detractors but he has his fans, too. "He always struck me as being very balanced in his views," Mary, a retired lab technician, said.

"We get too many politicians who come across as a bit extreme, but he wasn't," the 78-year-old retiree said.

"I think I would vote for him. He came over as sincere and honest."

Liberal insiders contacted by The Canberra Times decided to keep their heads down (though, one did say: "We don't really need him in any of these places.")

Mr Seselja is being seen in those circles as the candidate of the right. Insiders say there are at least four other candidates and perhaps as many as 10, with a decision expected towards the end of the month.

Dave Sharma, who lost his House of Representatives seat in 2022 is being mentioned in Liberal circles, as is Andrew Constance.

Meanwhile, people from the other parties look on in wonder.

The Nationals' Nichole Overall, who was in the NSW Legislative Assembly for Monaro until last year, welcomed Mr Seselja's decision to migrate from the ACT.

"We are very welcoming people on this side of the border and we are always happy to welcome new residents and future voters," she said.

POLITICS Zed's push for comeback

Justine Landis-Hanley, Karen Barlow

FORMER ACT senator Zed Seselja will turn his back on the territory in a bid to earn Liberal preselection for the party's NSW federal Senate spot, saying his family is joining "the exodus out of Canberra into regional New South Wales".

In an unlisted Youtube campaign video, the 46-year-old conservative promised to come after immigration numbers, cancel culture, and "the woke indoctrination of our kids" if he was selected for the seat vacated by former foreign affairs minister Marise Payne.

"We have to fight against cancel culture, and the attempts by the government to censor opinions that they don't agree with," Mr Seselja said.

"We need to stand up against the woke indoctrination of our kids in schools, and against the left wing bias in the ABC".

Several of the Coalition's conservative figures - including former prime minister Tony Abbott, Liberal National senator Matt Canavan, and shadow defence minister Andrew Hastie - appeared in the video, urging party members to back Mr Seselja into the role.

Mr Abbott said that Mr Seselja would be "an absolute rock solid member of Peter Dutton's team"; an apparent nod to the fact that several politicians have exited the party since Mr Dutton became leader.

"And that's what we need. We need a united, cohesive, committed team in the run up to the next election which is absolutely winnable," the former prime minister said.

Mr Dutton has also backed Seselja in a letter to preselectors, according to reports in Nine newspapers. But a moderate Liberal source told The Canberra Times that the high level intervention from Mr Dutton "won't change much" and former NSW transport minister Andrew Constance is still the front-runner for the Senate vacancy.

Others in the party have frowned upon Mr Seselja's bid to distance himself from the territory that first made him a federal senator.

"Seems he never liked it here in the first place. Canberrans have a right to be even more angry with him," a Canberra Liberal source told The Canberra Times.

Zed Seselja. Picture by Keegan Carroll

There are just 10 days to go until members vote on who will be their next NSW senator on November 26.

Mr Seselja is seen as a right faction front-runner among 10 candidates seeking to replace Ms Payne, a long-serving moderate figure.

In the video, which has received more than 800 views in three days, Mr Seselja told preselectors that the Coalition's success in defeating the Voice to Parliament was a "demonstration that when we stand up for our values, we can bring the Australian people with us".

"So now we as a party have a choice to make: do we retreat and become just a pale imitation of Labor or a lighter shade of teal? Or do we fight?" he said.

Aside from Mr Constance, his pre-selection rivals also include former Wentworth MP Dave Sharma, and Monica Tudehope, who worked as an advisor to former NSW premier Dominic Perrottet.

The Canberra Times previously reported Mr Seselja's decision to run for the NSW senate sent shock waves through the Canberra Liberals.

"He claims to really care about the ACT. It looks like he mostly cares about himself," a senior Liberal source told this masthead in October.

Australia continues to back humanitarian calls: Wong

Kat Wong, Tess Ikononou

AUSTRALIA has backed a UN resolution demanding all sides in the Hamas-Israel war protect civilians, particularly children.

The United Nations Security Council resolution demanded all those involved in the conflict comply with international law, particularly for the protection of civilian life and children.

The resolution called for the immediate and unconditional release of all hostages.

Foreign Minister Penny

Wong noted the resolution was the first resolution on the Middle East to be adopted by the council since 2016, which demonstrated the "unity" on the conflict.

"Australia has and will continue to support these calls," she posted on X, formerly known as Twitter.

Hamas, considered a terrorist organisation in Australia, launched an attack on Israel on October 7, killing about 1200 people and taking more than 220 hostages.

In response, Israel has bombarded Gaza, which has killed more than 12,000 people. The conflict has sparked protests and vigils around the world, and has fuelled Islamophobia and anti-Semitism.

Victorian MP Josh Burns and NSW MP Julian Leeser said Australian Jews and Muslims should not be used as "political footballs".

The comments come after Prime Minister Anthony Albanese accused Opposition Leader Peter Dutton of weaponising anti-Semitism to criticise the government's response to escalating violence in the Gaza Strip.

Mr Burns said inflammatory remarks should not be made, which would "put kerosene on already hot flames".

"It doesn't matter whether you're a Jewish person or Islamic person, you should feel safe in Australia," Mr Burns told ABC radio on Thursday.

"I want them to feel like they are proud Australians and that they can go to the mosque and be a part of their community and practise their faith and be with their family and live peaceful lives in this country."

Mr Leeser agreed and noted anti-Semitism had always been an issue in Australia, with many Jewish institutions forced to hire additional security at normal times.

"The level of anti-Semitism is off the charts in this country. We shouldn't try to downplay the way the Jewish community is feeling at this time," he told ABC Radio.

The Prime Minister told reporters at the APEC Summit in San Francisco, he expected the Middle East to be a topic of discussion among world leaders.

Man, 38, bargained with child for sex

Tim Piccione

A MAN who paid a 14-year-old girl for sex, in a case of child prostitution, "knew her age and continued anyway", a court has heard.

"The complainant on several occasions expressed that she was unsure and he just offered her more money," Justice Tanya Bright said on Thursday.

Mark Roldan Viray faced the NSW District Court after pleading guilty to acting as a client with a child in prostitution.

As it stands, a charge of having sexual intercourse with a child will also be taken into account in the Queanbeyan offender's sentencing.

Agreed facts tendered to the court outline the 38-year-old man's predatory crime, for which he was "the instigator".

Viray and the victim first began speaking on social media app Snapchat, where the child said she was 14 and the pair agreed to have sex for money.

By law, a child cannot consent to sex with an adult.

The offender initially told the victim he was 19 but later lied again and said he was 23 before they eventually met up in July 2021 at Lanyon Marketplace in Conder.

She was unsure and he just offered her more money.

Justice Tanya Bright

"The complainant stated she wasn't sure she wanted to proceed with the sexual intercourse," agreed facts state.

While the pair initially agreed on oral sex for $100, Viray increased his offering to $200 and then $300 to persuade the child into having penile-vaginal sex.

The victim reported the incident to her mother a week after and later to police.

Justice Bright said Viray's letter of apology to the victim showed a lack of insight into his crimes and the dynamics of child sexual assault.

"It's highly unlikely a [now] 16-year-old who had been subjected to these acts would be likely to speak to him. I expect he still doesn't completely understand the seriousness of the offending," the judge said.

Justice Bright said she accepted the man had shown remorse for his actions.

"If you don't fully understand the impacts of your crime, then it does somewhat reduce your capacity to be remorseful," she said.

Prosecutor Jillian Walshe said Viray's lack of insight was further demonstrated by him claiming the girl looked older than her age, which "formed another basis as to why he continued".

"He admits he was being selfish and nothing stopped him," Ms Walshe said.

Defence lawyer Luke Vozella said his client's offending was "opportunistic" and that "pre-planning was minimal".

However, Justice Bright responded there was some "forethought" for Viray to take the victim to an empty home. "He's obviously thought, 'that's an opportunity for me, there's going to be no one home at that time,'" the judge said.

"It wasn't spontaneous."

Viray has spent over a year in custody for his offending.

The matter is set to return next week.

25 years in prison for nuclear non-compliance

CRIMINAL penalties will be put in place to protect Australia's pathway to nuclear-powered submarines and a new regulator stood up to ensure safety and compliance.

Acting Prime Minister and Defence Minister Richard Marles introduced the new laws to Parliament on Thursday.

The independent Australian Naval Nuclear Power Safety Regulator will oversee a licensing regime to ensure compliance with Australia's international obligations, including nuclear non-proliferation.

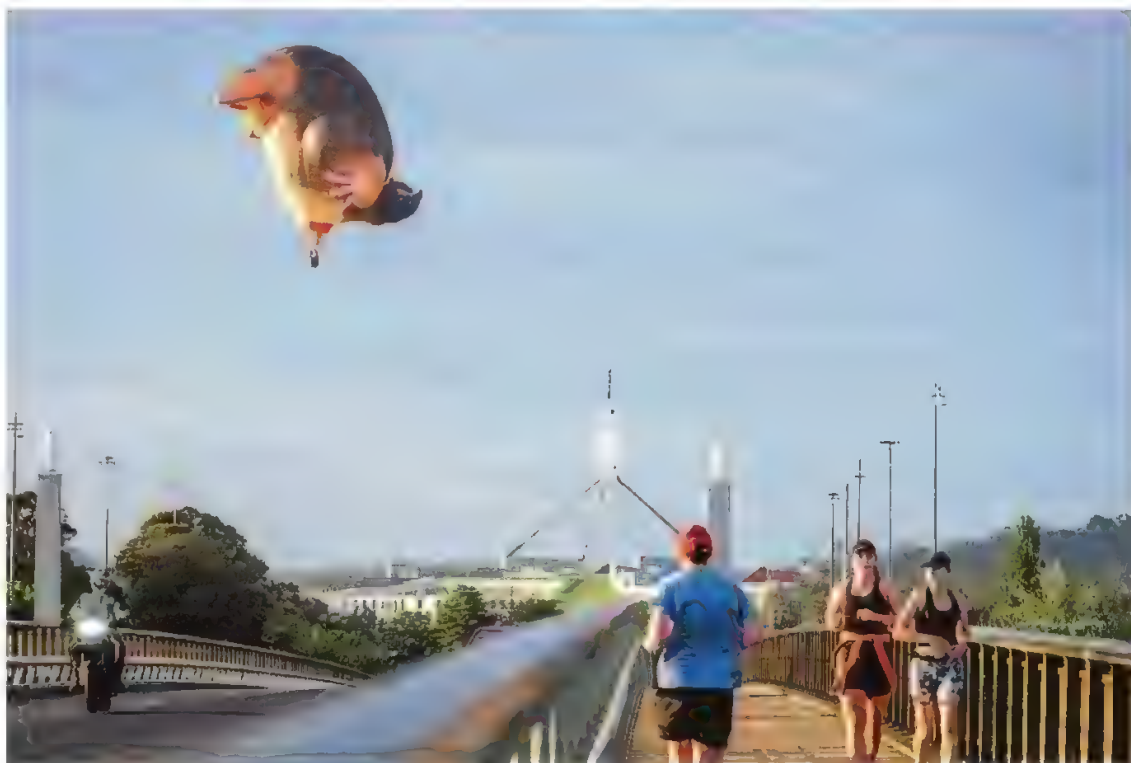

Those who breach their duties face a maximum of 25 years behind bars while companies face fines of $31 million.

The existing nuclear regulations are not designed to handle nuclear-powered submarines and don't account for the entire program, such as the submarine platform, infrastructure, facilities and supporting systems, Mr Marles said.

The regulator's independence means while it sits within the defence portfolio it doesn't answer to the defence force chain of command or take directions from the department.

The minister will have limited powers to give the regulator a direction when it's in the interests of national security and to deal with an emergency.

The Defence Minister said Australia would still meet its previous nuclear non-proliferation commitments with the arrival of the nuclear submarines.

Skywhale and Skywhalepapa surprised Canberrans with a secret test flight for conservation purposes. Pictures by Karleen Minney

Bageshri Savyasachi

SKYWHALE and Skywhalepapa have graced Canberra's skies again, for the first time this year.

The pair have been on a tour of regional Australia since 2021, and their most recent show was in May.

The Canberra Times was invited to a "secret test flight" just after dawn on Thursday.

The specialty hot air balloons were inflated at 6am at John Dunmore Lang Place and took flight for just over 45 minutes.

"Gorgeous, isn't it?" Maggie Nunan said. The Canberran had never seen Skywhale or Skywhalepapa and didn't expect to see them take flight on her morning walk.

The test flight was scheduled to ensure the artwork was in good working condition and for preservation purposes.

Conservator Carmela Mollica, or "the Skywhale nanny", as folks from the National Art Gallery like to call her, was more focused on making sure the artworks were airworthy. Although both balloons are certified to fly, she said they like to do at least one test flight a year.

The balloons must be inflated first thing in the morning, and even a small change in wind conditions would have stopped the test flight from going ahead.

Tour ride agency Balloon Aloft is well acquainted with the specialty balloons and has the National Gallery's go-to pilots. Without a steering wheel, the pilots routinely take on the challenge of landing Skywhale and Skywhalepapa in an appropriate location where the wind takes them. It could be a paddock, a field or an oval (when they're lucky).

Once deflated, the conservation crew worked to clean the balloons to make sure there's no cow or kangaroo dung on the artwork. After the short flight, the fantastical creatures were boxed up to be returned to storage at the National Gallery of Australia.

Whale done, until next time.

ACT wins $27m infrastructure boost amid national cuts

Justine Landis-Hanley

THE federal government has committed an extra $27 million towards infrastructure in the ACT, as the Commonwealth axes 50 road and rail projects across the country.

As previously reported in The Canberra Times, the majority of this additional spend ($25 million) will go towards the Molonglo River bridge crossing. The Gundaroo Drive duplication and Beltana Road improvements will receive an extra $1.8 million and $300,000 respectively.

The announcement follows an independent review published by Infrastructure Minister Catherine King on Thursday, which found the Commonwealth's $120 billion infrastructure 10-year pipeline - which she says Labor inherited from the Coalition - was facing a $32.8 billion cost blowout.

The review found the number of projects in the pipeline had tripled between 2015 and 2022, and couldn't be delivered with the $120 billion allocated even with state and territory contributions.

"There are projects in the [pipeline] that do not demonstrate merit, lack any national strategic rationale and do not meet the Australian government's national investment priorities," the review said.

"Too many large-scale projects are receiving funding commitments without adequate planning, costings and programming to sufficiently manage the significant increase in delivery costs within a volatile market."

Ms King accused the Coalition government of deliberately "announcing projects that did not have enough funding and they knew could not be delivered", labelling their actions economic vandalism.

But the Coalition refuted these claims, with National's senator Bridget McKenzie accusing Ms King of cutting projects for political reasons. "I completely reject the claims from Minister King, who is hyper-partisan in her response to this review and it is evidenced in the projects she cut and the projects she committed to," Senator McKenzie told reporters in Parliament.

Senator McKenzie said it was the responsibility for state and territory governments to deliver the infrastructure pipeline, and blamed the construction union and COVID-19 for driving up costs.

"There's a whole raft of reasons why the delay in delivery occurred, and they sit at the state government's feet," she said.

The federal government announced that commonwealth funding will be cut for 50 projects across the country, representing around $7 billion in savings. It insisted that while projects have been axed, there is no cut to its overall $120 billion infrastructure investment.

Sydney's M7-M12 interchange, Victoria's Geelong fast rail, and the long-awaited upgrade to the McKoy Street-Hume Freeway intersection on the western fringe of Wodonga are among the abandoned projects.

In the ACT, the inner Canberra corridor planning package, valued at $1.5 million, was the only project to face the chopping block. Budget papers did not contain details on what this project involved.

Ms King had stressed that smaller jurisdictions, like the ACT, would have special consideration on the infrastructure overhaul, which The Canberra Times understands is reflected in the territory's $27 million infrastructure boost.

The additional $25 million for the Molonglo bridge - which will service the growing region and supersede the low-lying Coppins Crossing - takes the project's total to $197.7 million.

The minister said another 31 projects across the country that were recommended for cancellation or descope will be rolled into road and rail corridors.

HIGH COURT RULING Govt proposes new laws for people released from indefinite immigration detention

Miriam Webber, Adrian Rollins

THE Albanese government agreed to Coalition amendments to its proposed controls on people released from indefinite immigration detention on Thursday, paving the way for the fast-tracked bill to pass.

Leader of the government in the Senate, Penny Wong, said the government had agreed to six amendments in principle, and was working to solidify them after question time, before the bill could pass the upper house.

It is expected to pass Parliament on Thursday evening with Coalition support, while the Greens said they would oppose it.

The bill proposes amendments to the Migration Act and the Migration Regulations, to "support the effective management of non-citizens released from immigration detention", Immigration Minister Andrew Giles said in his first reading speech on Thursday morning.

The High Court's decision last week determined it was unlawful to detain a person in immigration indefinitely when there is no prospect of removing them from Australia in the foreseeable future.

The reasons for the High Court's decision have not yet been handed down.

This forced the government to release 84 people into the community, some of whom had been convicted of crimes and served their prison sentences before being detained. Mr Giles on Tuesday said this included "three murderers and several sex offenders".

Those judged to pose an "unacceptable risk of harm to the community" would be required to wear an electronic monitoring device, and adhere to curfews specified by the minister, as per conditions of their bridging visa.

"These measures are consistent with the legitimate objective of community safety and the rights and interests of the public," Mr Giles said.

Amendments applied to the whole group would introduce mandatory obligations for people to seek approval before entering a range of employment types, including those relating to vulnerable people and children.

They would also be required to report changes in finances, and accommodation circumstances to the government, as well as any travel, associations with clubs or organisations, or individuals, entities or organisations linked to criminal activities.

The bill proposes new criminal offences relating to the breach of mandatory visa reporting conditions, compliance with the curfew and compliance with wearing the electronic device.

Each offence would carry a maximum penalty of five years and equivalent penalty units to address serious repeated cases of non-compliance.

Mr Giles flagged that more legislation could be in the works.

"The government will continue to work through the implications of this high court judgment and the ongoing engagement of visa holders is necessary to support this process," he said.

"These amendments are necessary as an immediate response following the high court's decision. Further responses may be required once we have received the High Court's reasons for decision."

Opposition Leader Peter Dutton criticised the absence of Prime Minister Anthony Albanese in Parliament on Thursday.

Mr Albanese had travelled to San Francisco to attend an Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation meeting, but Mr Dutton said "he should be here".

"I think it is completely, utterly unconscionable that the Prime Minister has not been here to deal with this matter," he explained.

"The safety and security of the Australian population is the first charge of any leader of this country. And this prime minister is missing in action."

The Opposition Leader accused the government of being caught out by the High Court ruling and a lack of preparation for its consequences.

Mr Dutton said the Coalition wanted more time to review the bill, but on first reading "it is completely and totally inadequate".

Home Affairs Minister Clare O'Neil hit back that Mr Dutton "never wrote laws as tough as this" during his time as home affairs minister.

"The legal advice that we have been given is that we are going as far as we can in order to manage the situation before us," Ms O'Neil said.

"We are in a rush, I would like to get this through the Parliament today and I need the opposition's support to do that," she said, adding this would be "a test for the opposition".

Greens senator Nick McKim, the party's immigration spokesperson said the Greens were concerned about the necessity and proportionality of the legislation, as well as the limited appeal rights afforded to people.

Senator McKim called the situation a "confected emergency" and claimed there were a large number of people to whom the laws would be applied "who have never been convicted of a single crime".

"It is contrary to natural justice, it is contrary to the principles of a liberal democracy to expose one group of people because of their visa status to a regime of punitive punishment, that other people are not," he said.

It is not yet clear how many of the detainees had been convicted of crimes.

Ms O'Neil said on Thursday: "Some of those people have committed deplorable, disgusting crimes."

BOOKS Why the novella is having a resurgence

Sally Pryor

IT'S a speedy 108 pages and would likely take you just a few hours to read.

But Jessica Au's novella Cold Enough For Snow, that follows a young woman on holiday with her mother in Japan, has so many layers it could take a decade to unpack.

In fact, says Au, she took a good 10 years to "get to" this work in its finished form, which is this year's winner of the Prime Minister's Literary Award for fiction.

Au won alongside Sam Vincent for his non-fiction book My Father and Other Animals, Sarah Winifred Searle for her young adult work The Greatest Thing, Jasmine Seymour for her children's book Open Your Heart To Country, Gavin Yuan Gao for his poetry collection At the Altar of Touch and Shannyn Palmer for her Australian history work Unmaking Angas Downs.

It's a collection that, in the words of federal arts minister Tony Burke, "showed the incredible depth and breadth of Australia's literary talent".

"Stories like these allow us to learn about ourselves, understand each other and let the world get to know us," he said.

The winner of each category won $80,000.

Au said while the novella seemed to have taken a back seat in contemporary literature trends, it was a form that takes just as much skill and technique as anything longer or more dense.

"I just think each sentence should work to layer something to the story," she said.

"I think there's a beautiful sharpness to a lot of these short books. They don't overstay their welcome. They just know exactly what they need to do."

And, judging by the swathe of awards and commendations the book has received, including the

Victorian Premier's Literary

Award, the Victorian Prize for Literature and the Readings Prize for fiction, and shortlistings for the Miles Franklin and the Dublin Literary Award, among others, the novella may well be due for a comeback.

Cold Enough For Snow has been hailed as an exceptionally skillful rendering of relationships and landscape.

As the award judges point out, it's all about what is left unsaid, the distances between people and the unknowability of others' thoughts.

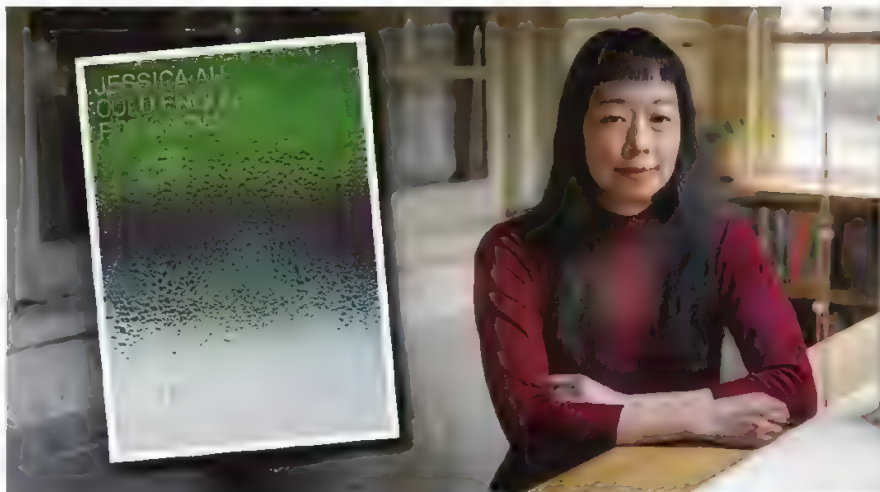

"The novel is a crystalline technical feat: a series of small portraits and wider scenes, with stillness achieved by capturing arrested motion," says the citation.

"Here is the daily embedded in the eternal: here we are in lives past, but also entirely present."

Au, who works as a librarian in Melbourne, said it had "been suggested" her that she try writing longer works. "I just couldn't write any other way, basically".

"My general philosophy is that a book dictates its own length in a way, with its own momentum and how much is in it, and how long it needs to say what it wants to say," she said.

"There's something about the pace and the crispness and the poetry of the short book that I really like."

Australia is overusing antibiotics: report

PATIENTS have been warned to stop stockpiling antibiotics and think twice about prescriptions for minor illnesses with concerns one of the most serious health challenges is getting worse.

Dangerous bacteria that cause golden staph infections, gastro and gonorrhoea are becoming increasingly resistant to common drugs, according to a new report from the Australian Commission on Safety and Quality in Health Care released on Thursday. In serious cases when antibiotics don't work patients have no other treatment options.

Prescription rates for the drugs fell 25 per cent at the height of the COVID-19 pandemic but there was a concerning 10 per cent uptick in prescriptions in 2022, the report showed.

It found Australia has one of highest consumption levels of antibiotics in the developed world, as one in three people had at least one drug dispensed last year. It's got health experts worried and calling for urgent action to curb the trend before it's too late.

The senior medical adviser to the commission, Professor John Turnidge, said Australia still has an opportunity to tackle what he described as one of the most serious health challenges of our time. He said doctors, other healthcare workers and patients all had a role to play in the nation becoming "smarter" about prescribing the medications.

"Let's all think twice before automatically prescribing and using antibiotics - or having them 'just in case'," Professor Turnidge said. "If we don't, in the future we may not be able to perform medical procedures such as organ transplants, cancer chemotherapy, diabetes management and major surgery. That is a bleak future that none of us wish to contemplate."

The World Health Organisation estimates antimicrobial resistance could result in up to 10 million deaths by 2050. A study published in the highly respected medical journal The Lancet in 2022 found it already contributes to hundreds of deaths in Australia every year.

Infectious diseases expert and commission adviser Professor Peter Collignon reminded patients there was no way antibiotics could help treat viruses like colds or flu and about 5 per cent of people suffered adverse effects from the drugs.

"For a serious infection such as meningitis, pneumonia or sepsis, you will need antibiotics to stay alive and your doctor will help you navigate this," Professor Collignon said. "Yet for many people dealing with non-serious illnesses, this is not the case."

Professor Turnidge also said there was emerging evidence antimicrobial use may contribute to long-term chronic illness later in life. "Antibiotics can save your life ... but we must not forget that they can also cause significant harm."

Prescription rates for antibiotics rose 10 per cent in 2022, according to a new report. Picture AAP

Swim coach jailed for 32 years for sexual abuse of 11 children

A SWIM coach who groomed and sexually abused 11 young students over more than a decade could spend three times that behind bars for creating a culture where perverted behaviour was seen as normal.

Paul Douglas Frost was sentenced on Thursday after being found guilty of 43 offences over his abuse of children under his care at a swimming school in Sydney's southwest between 1996 and 2009. As the 48-year-old watched emotionless via videolink from Shortland prison, Judge Sarah Huggett said the coach "deliberately created a culture which facilitated his offending". This included normalising talk of sex amongst the children and teenagers he was teaching, encouraging sexual activity both with and between students, and engaging in graphic acts in the school's changing room and storage room.

"Paul had built a culture of these types of things being normal," one of his victims wrote in a statement to the court. "I know they seem a bit horrifying and strange now."

The victim said that as a boy he went along with discussing sexual matters openly with Frost as he wanted to be one of the cool kids. "I thought talking about that ... was just what people did," he wrote. "I thought it was normal."

Frost, who was once a contestant on cooking show MasterChef, was given a maximum jail sentence of 32 years, expiring in June, 2055. He will be first eligible for parole in June 2047 after 24 years behind bars.

Frost was arrested in September 2019 at his Sylvania home. Initially charged with only 10 offences, further allegations were raised as police investigated his crimes.

The final 43 charges included several counts of sexual intercourse with a child under his care, multiple charges of aggravated indecent assault of a person under 16 and grooming children for sexual activity.

Judge Huggett found Frost manipulated his victims and contrived opportunities to be alone with them. She found each victim was a reliable witness who gave evidence with "dignity and courage".

Maccas loses beef with Hungry Jack's

MCDONALD'S has lost a three-year trademark fight with fast-food rival Hungry Jack's. The US hamburger giant sued Hungry Jack's in 2020 claiming its sale of the "Big Jack" and "Mega Jack" burgers infringed the Big Mac trademark.

On Thursday, the Federal Court dismissed the allegations, saying neither burger brand was deceptively similar to the Big Mac and Hungry Jack's had not engaged in trademark infringement. But McDonald's succeeded on a separate consumer law claim with the court finding Hungry Jack's had misled consumers by advertising that its Big Jack burger contained 25 per cent more beef than its Big Mac counterpart.

At trial, Hungry Jack's chief marketing officer Scott Baird told the court there was an "element of cheekiness" in the firm's choice of burger name but said the brands were not chosen because of their similarity with McDonald's burgers. "I was aware that the name would likely be perceived as a deliberate taunt of McDonald's," he wrote in an affidavit.

Justice Stephen Burley found consumers would not be confused about which restaurant sold the Big Jack or Big Mac and said McDonald's had provided no evidence of any deception or confusion. Hungry Jack's wished to compete with McDonald's through a name which had echoes of the Big Mac brand but was "recognisably different" from it, the judge found. He made similar findings when comparing the Mega Jack and Mega Mac trade marks.

However, Justice Burley ruled Hungry Jack's had breached consumer law through the marketing campaign about its burger's meat content. After testing and weighing of the different burger patties by experts, the judge found Hungry Jack's burgers contained "significantly less" than the 25 per cent additional beef advertised. The matter will now go to a liability hearing, where Hungry Jack's could face financial penalties.

Hard Solo fizzles, regulator orders rebranding for drink

THE alcoholic version of the carbonated lemon-flavoured soft drink Solo will be rebranded after the beverage's design fizzed out with the regulator over concerns the design strongly appealed to minors.

The Alcohol Beverages Advertising Code (ABAC) adjudication panel determined Hard Solo breached the panel's responsible alcohol marketing code following 10 complaints from the public over the brand's name and can design. The panel had previously determined the alcoholic drink's design met the standards.

While the panel accepted the beverage's producer Carlton and United Breweries was careful to devise a design that identified Hard Solo as an alcoholic beverage, it found the brand recognition was entirely familiar to minors.

The brewery said it was disappointed with the outcome, but accepted the panel's decision. It will re-name the drink Hard Rated.

LISA GOES GARDENING

FEISTY, determined star of Blue Heelers and Sea Patrol, Lisa McCune is not someone you would expect to find digging in a garden plot.

"I am an avid gardener," the four-time Gold Logie winner says.

Just before lockdown she had an idea for a show in which she would travel around Australia showcasing the country's botanical gardens.

"Then this [Channel 9's Garden Hustle] came along, and I am so glad I did it. It's just gorgeous."

McCune hosts the show alongside renowned landscaper Dave Franklin, and resident pooch Robin.

"It's really great working alongside Dave. He gives the home gardeners tips on what they need to do from scratch and advises them along the way. And Robin is a bigger star than Dave and I, he is a professional."

"We had a gorgeous crew, bouncing around from state to state and you get to go into the houses and into the gardens."

Unlike other renovation shows the pairs featured do the work themselves but their only competition is the time factor. Sponsors provide materials, but the finished garden is their only prize.

"They had to have a plan and are given 48 hours to do the bigger gardens, but if it doesn't look like they are going to finish, they get help from our professionals. It's beautiful to see the before and afters. The people feel quite proud."

Be prepared to hear the word "hustle" many times, as McCune and crew pitch in, too.

"We were all there helping towards the end as it got close to deadlines. Dave talks them through some of the pitfalls and I talk to them about how they came to do their gardens."

"You never know where you will find a good story and, as an actor, I love good storytelling. I get to find out the stories of these lovely people."

Bond meets the Amazing Race

STREAMING

Prime Video

What do you get if you mix James Bond with The Amazing Race and Who Wants to Be A Millionaire? Probably something close to this new reality competition show. Created under the real 007 banner, this series sees nine British pairs of contestants traverse the world finding clues, completing challenges and answering questions in the hopes of winning a million bucks. If they get their question wrong, they're out of the running. All the teams start in the stunning and drizzly Scottish Highlands, before their unique first clues and questions take them on different journeys. Meanwhile, actor Brian Cox (Succession) is the puppetmaster figure behind the scenes - he sits in his impressive villain-like office and looks over the progress of all the teams on a series of different screens, making punny little comments and giving out cryptic clues. It's a pretty enjoyable show on the whole, highlighting some great international locations and putting regular people through Bond-esque situations, from scaling cranes to facing off against snakes.

Brian Cox is the man in the chair in 007: Road to a Million, while Robbie Williams reflects on his life in his eponymous documentary series. Pictures by Prime Video, Netflix

NCIS: SYDNEY

Paramount+

Long-running crime procedural NCIS has arrived on Australian shores for its first franchise outside the US. The new show makes great use of Sydney Harbour, showcasing it extensively in the first episode. The story kicks off with a member of the US Navy falling dead into the water during a ceremony to mark the great collaboration between the two nations as part of AUKUS (the security partnership between America, Australia and the UK - not that that's explained at all in the show) and the arrival of a nuclear-powered submarine from the US. AFP detectives JD (Todd Lassance, who seems the most comfortable actor in the new show) and Evie (a spirited Tuuli Narkle) pair with visiting NCIS agents Michelle Mackey (an unconvincing Olivia Swann) and DeShawn

Jackson (the likeable Sean Sagar) to investigate, before their respective bosses decide to keep the partnership on a more permanent basis (and thus, provide the basis for the TV show). Bonus points for the casting of William McInnes in the medical examiner role.

ROBBIE WILLIAMS

Netflix

Beloved singer, songwriter and all-round entertainer Robbie Williams gets the doco series treatment in this Netflix four-parter. Coming on the back of the highly successful Beckham series, which was also a four-parter, it's impossible not to draw comparisons between then two. This one is undoubtedly poorer than the earlier series, but not without its insights. The larrikin stagehand, reviewing archive footage on a laptop while lounging on his bed in his underwear, speaks candidly about feeling overwhelmed and depressed in the first decade of his fame, from teen sensation in Take That, to rising solo star. The doco series though would benefit from interviews with other people now, not just words from the archive footage.

THE KILLER

Netflix

David Fincher is unquestionably one of the most talented directors going around. And while this film is squarely in the Fincher wheelhouse, it is paced so slowly that it will lose most viewers early. For those that persevere, there are some moments of humour and a great scene with Michael Fassbender and Tilda Swinton to celebrate.

Scrublands lures Heathcote home

Josh Leeson

FOLLOWING the success of Netflix series Pieces Of Her, which also starred fellow Australian actress Toni Collette, many would have expected Bella Heathcote to double down her focus on US-based roles.

While the spy-thriller was filmed in Sydney, due to the pandemic, it was a US production and a highly successful one.

Pieces Of Her spent five weeks in the Netflix's global top-10 and Heathcote, in particular, was hailed for her performance as Andy Oliver, a young woman who slowly uncovers her mother's dark past.

The Melbourne-raised Heathcote, 36, has spent more than a decade living in Los Angeles, building a varied acting career, despite joking her "bread-and-butter characters are typically grief, trauma, abandonment."

She's starred alongside Hollywood heavyweights Johnny Depp and Michelle Pfeiffer in Tim Burton's Dark Shadows (2012), opposite Hugh Grant in The Rewrite (2014), and appeared in Fifty Shades Darker (2017).

Despite building a strong US resume, the former Neighbours star has always been attracted to Australian stories.

She had a leading role in Australian horror film The Relic (2020) and appeared amid a star-studded cast on this year's madcap comedy *C*U*G*H*T*. Both were released on Stan.

"As a young person I left Australia and it's after leaving and moving to LA that I've learnt to appreciate it more and more and really wanted to tell more Australian stories and invest more," Heathcote says over Zoom from Los Angeles.

"I love what Stan are doing and that we have that platform to make these stories. I wanna see them and I wanna be in them."

Heathcote's latest Australian role is undoubtedly her strongest.

Scrublands is a four-part series based on Chris Hammer's 2018 crime novel.

Investigative journalist Martin Scarsden (Luke Arnold) is sent to the fictional small town of Riversend to write a "puff piece" about how the community is recovering 12 months after charismatic Catholic priest Byron Swift (Jay Ryan) shot five parishioners, before dying himself, a day after being accused of being a paedophile.

obvious comparisons to hit Australian "rural-noir" film, The Dry.

The series also explores the role of religion in small communities, the impact of trauma and the media's role in reporting tragic events.

"What I found fascinating about the script is each character's arcs and their journeys," Heathcote says.

"I do think it's incredible that the landscape is almost another character in the show. As an Australian, I wanna see Australian stories reflected and things, not just characters, that I recognise.

"There's the trauma of what's happened, but also the trauma of drought and the economic hardships this town has suffered."

Heathcote plays Mandy, a cafe owner and single mum, who urges Scarsden to further investigate the story behind the priest's massacre and the dark secrets he took to his grave.

It wasn't until after filming wrapped up in the Castlemaine, in Victoria, that Heathcote read Hammer's Scrublands novel and its sequel Silver.

There's been several changes made in the screenplay to Mandy's character, which

As an Australian, I wanna see Australian stories reflected and things, not just characters, that I recognise.

Bella Heathcote

Heathcote says, has made her a stronger part of the narrative.

"I thought it was interesting that the whole premise of the show is you see this crime happen and it's not a 'who done it' because you see," she says.

"Throughout the series you figure out why and you see why Mandy so desperately wants to know and all the townspeople.

"They want some peace a year after this horrific act. I really appreciate the path Mandy takes to learn that information and also her relationship with the two male leads and the arc she has as well.

"The Mandy before this event and the Mandy after are not surprisingly two very different people."

While Heathcote might be devoting more time and her talents to Australian productions, she's hardly given up on her American ambitions.

Last week she finished her debut theatrical performance in Samuel Baum's comedy The Engagement Party at LA's Geffen Playhouse.

Heathcote played bride-to-be Katherine who hosts an engagement party with her fiancé Josh for their family and friends. But when a glass of wine is split the party quickly unravels.

Heathcote describes theatre performance as "boot camp" or "push-ups for acting."

"It's completely different," she says. "I get why people do it. All my actor friends for so long were like, 'dude you need to do a play, it's incredible.'"

"It's so scary and so exhilarating and it is a different style of acting.

"On-camera acting feels so much more intimate and you get to really block out the audience.

"Whereas this, you're inviting them in and dealing with their responses in real time.

"There's a projection out, not just of your voice, but the performance. It's a completely different skills set."

BLUEYFEST COUNTDOWN

6am, Sunday, ABC Kids

Okay, it's time for a confession - I've never understood the huge fascination people have with this series.

I don't begrudge it - in fact I think it's great that an Australian-made series has been so very successful - nor do I think it's misplaced. I just don't get it.

I've sat down and watched a few episodes and thought it was alright, but never felt the need to tune in again - unlike so many other adults.

So it's a safe bet that I won't be watching on Sunday as they count down the top 100 episodes as voted by the public.

But I'm sure that plenty of other people will.

Especially the young ones, whose parents can plunk them down in front of this Bluey marathon and go back to bed for a few more hours sleep on a Sunday morning.

BIG BROTHER

8.30pm, Monday, Seven

The premiere of a new season of Big Brother totally caught me by surprise - I wasn't aware such a thing was in the pipeline.

Granted, I'm far from their target market but I would have expected to see something promoting the new season.

Perhaps I'm not alone; going on the low ratings in its first week an awful lot of people didn't know it was coming.

The ratings were so bad the network decided this week to push its start time back an hour in the hope that some more people will start watching.

Of even more concern for Channel 7 is the rejigging of Big Brother has alienated those who were fans of the franchise.

It's now called Big Brother: House of Love and looks like an indoor version of Love Island, with a bunch of largely white buff blokes walking around shirtless as often as possible and women

Police detective Adam Kruk puts on his best tortured expression in the Polish series Raven. Below, Parents might be forced out of bed early in Sunday because of the Blueyfest Countdown who seem to be in some undeclared contest to wear the skimpiest outfit.

The entire focus of the series now seems to be trying to hook up with another housemate.

In years gone by there was far more diversity in the cast, which allowed viewers to find someone with whom they identified.

Now, with a bunch of vain Instagram influencers on board the whole tone has changed - instead of finding someone you like, you just end up hating them all.

It may be understandable that Channel 7 looked to breath new life into the Big Brother concept, which had really lost people's attention years ago.

But what they've turned it into is only likely to lose whatever audience they had.

THE RAVEN

12am, Thursday, SBS On Demand

What is it with TV drama that it assumes all police detectives are drug-addicted, tortured individuals with a dark past?

Sure, they'd see some bad things in their line of work but the insistence on painting them as supremely messed-up people is getting a bit tired.

The latest in this format is Adam Kruk, a Polish detective who spends part of the first episode walking around with a neck brace (the reason is never explained) and popping pain medication. In a huge plot contrivance, he's sent to his home town to bust a cigarette-smuggling racket - the very same town that houses something from his dark past.

Hunter's where the heart is for Snowden

Craig Kerry

VETERAN Sydney trainer Peter Snowden has scaled the dizzy heights of racing, including back-to-back Everest wins with Redzel, but home has always been the Hunter Valley.

So the Scone born and bred horseman has regularly returned to the Hunter, and regularly won, especially at Newcastle.

The $1 million Newcastle Herald The Hunter (1300 metres), now in its fifth year, remains one of the few features in the region to elude Snowden and his training partner son, Paul. Their best result is Signore Fox's fifth in 2021, when Lost And Running was a dominant winner.

This year shapes as the Snowden's best chance yet, with two-time Everest runner Mazu and King Of Sparta among the leading chances in the quality handicap.

Mazu was battling Murrumbidgee trainer David McCollm's Far Too Easy for favouritism at $5.50 with the TAB, while King Of Sparta was $8.

Mazu, which was third in the 2022 Everest, has endured a luckless spring campaign. Locked in for another Everest shot, the Maurice five-year-old resumed with a ninth in the The Shorts (1100m) after a tough run from a wide draw, then was scratched from the Premiere Stakes (1200m) when slightly lame on race day.

The disrupted lead-in was compounded by a bad draw in 11 for The Everest (1200m), where he then struck heavy interference in the straight to finish second last.

Mazu was then fifth, just over two lengths away from winner Bella Nipotina, in the Giga Kick Stakes (1300m) after a three-wide run for most of the trip.

Snowden was hoping for better luck in The Hunter after drawing six in the 16-horse event.

"Nothing has gone right but he's been racing against the best of the best, too," Snowden said.

"And he's had wide runs and whatnot. But they are the best horses around and he's getting beat only two lengths, so he's not far off the mark.

"It's been a bit frustrating we haven't won, but he gets his chance on Saturday probably."

Snowden has won all of the traditional group races at Newcastle, except for the Tibbie Stakes, and he has claimed three of the six Max Lees Classic for two-year-olds, a race now part of The Hunter standalone program.

A win for Mazu in The Hunter, though, would top them all.

"It would be a great race to win for more reasons than one, especially for this horse to get back into winning form would be special," he said.

"It's home so it's always good to go home, and winning races back where you come from is always special."

And he believed the Premiere Stakes setback should improve Mazu's chances in a race he was spelled before last year.

"He's missed one run this prep coming through, so he's always been one behind," he said.

"I just thought this time he still had a good one in him and his third and fourth runs are always his best, and this will be his fourth one this prep, so I'm happy with him."

Mazu trialled well, running strongly through the line, when fourth on Monday at Hawkesbury with Nash Rawiller aboard. Rawiller keeps the ride on Saturday.

Chad Schofield pilots King Of Sparta, which drew 10. The five-year-old I Am Invincible gelding was eighth last start in Everest consolation the Sydney Stakes (1200m) from gate 15 after a close second in the Bobbie Lewis Quality (1200m) at Flemington.

"He had a little tick-over trial last week just to keep him up to the mark, but he'll run well on Saturday," Snowden said.

Peter Snowden, inset, is hoping Mazu, main image, can win The Newcastle Herald Hunter. Pictures AAP

RACING NSW ANALYST

Race 1 - 12:35PM NZB AIRFREIGHT MAX LEES CLASSIC (900 METRES)

2. Market Magic was impressive in his one trial win. The Capitalist colt was given a dig to hold a spot in the early stages before responding nicely when asked to switch off heels in the straight and quicken. He'll have taken plenty of benefit from that hit out. The overall time was sharp as was the time home. Like the way Market Magic ran right through the line, even though you'd expect that over a 737m dash.

Dangers: Cylinder ran second in this race on debut last year and Godolphin are well represented again here. 1. Gram, a full brother to Zulfikar, who was an all the way winner over 1000m on debut at Flemington, has caught the eye in his two trials. The barrier mightn't be too bad, allowing the action to unfold in front of him before getting the last look.

How to play it: Market Magic to win

Race 2 - 1:10PM KARAKA 2024 MIDWAY BENCHMARK 72 HANDICAP (1600 METRES)

5. Resistible had to work early to find the front at Rosehill last start in the Four Pillars. She managed to back off in the middle stages but the damage was done by that point. The four-year-old felt the pinch late but still boxed away to run fourth, not beaten far. The daughter of Snitzel was also only second up, jumping from 1200m to 1500m.

Dangers: 4. Cosmic Field dashed home over the top to win at Newcastle last start, bouncing back to winner form. The talented gelding showed Nathan Doyle enough in his first campaign to deep end him in the G3 Carbone Club. He couldn't pick his feet up in the heavy conditions.

How to play it: Resistible to win

Race 3 - 1:45PM TAB HIGHWAY HANDICAP (1600 METRES)

7. Sharp Shock didn't get a lot of room last start at Randwick. He was never going to figure in the finish from where he settled in the run but he should have finished closer than 2.5L. That was in a benchmark race behind Ningaloo Star. Prior to that he was strong late behind Bandi's Boy. That proven to be a strong form reference with last week's Highway trifecta all coming through that 1200m race at Randwick.

Dangers: 2. Rematch reeled off a big close to beat a subsequent winner in Let's Try at Newcastle. That saw him start a prohibitive $1.28 at Muswellbrook where he was beaten. Just. That was a rare miss for the training duo of Paul Messara and Leah Gavranich. Of the 11 favourites they've saddled up together, eight have won.

How to play it: Sharp Shock to win

Race 4 - 2:20PM NZB INSURANCE F&M BENCHMARK 78 HANDICAP (1400 METRES)

Here we go again with 5. Lekvarte. The early price is too tempting. The grey mare fires fresh and has an excellent record at Newcastle. First up over 1400m is another tick, she has trialled well twice ahead of her return and she'll get a dry track. That's a lot of positives for a horse at double figure odds.

Dangers: 3. Portray had her chance at Randwick last start riding the speed at Randwick over 1400m, run down late by Gringotts. Back to fillies and mares company now fourth up and Nash jumps on. Nash jumps off 1. Zoe's Promise. Thought she did enough first up over 1300m. Her two previous wins have been over the mile.

Race 5 - 2:55PM ALF KNEEBONE TRANS-TASMAN TROPHY BENCHMARK 88 HANDICAP (1850 METRES)

12. I'mintowin was just impressive on the clock as he was to the eye on his Australian debut at Rosehill a fortnight ago. The former Kiwi went straight to the front, ran along and just kept on running. He was there to be beaten late. Hokkaido has since franked the form.

Dangers: 6. Pervade just took a few runs to settle into life in Australia. It's all clicking now. The French import caught the eye at Warwick Farm third up before going one better at Randwick last start. He was given a perfect ride but he maps beautifully again here. Won out to 2100m overseas.

How to play it: I'mintowin to win

Race 6 - 3:30PM NEW ZEALAND BLOODSTOCK THE BEAUFORD (2300 METRES)

4. Torrens won the first running of the Beauford two years ago. He trounced his rivals having led. The seven-year-old is a rocks or diamonds style of horse. If he doesn't win he just about runs last. However, there's an easy case to be made that he brings the strongest form line coming into this. He didn't get a lot of luck in the St Leger five weeks ago behind Land Legend who broke the track record.

Dangers: Want to give 9. Canberra Legend another chance after having genuine excuses in the Rosehill Gold Cup but just not sure what to make of that race. There was two lengths from first to seventh. 2.

Stockman was on the hammer of the trifecta on a good track. 3. Sky Lab had a hard luck story to tell and perhaps should have won. Canberra Legend drew wide and couldn't find cover.

How to play it: Torrens to win

Race 7 - 4:05PM NEW ZEALAND BLOODSTOCK 3YO SPRING STAKES (GROUP 3) (1600 METRES)

1. Kintyre is well placed under the set weight conditions of this race. He has been mixing it with best three year-old milers in Sydney over the carnival. He was beaten less than a length by Raf Attack and Tom Kitten in the Gloaming Stakes two starts ago.

Dangers: 4. Sly Boots came from last to win his maiden at the midweeks two starts ago. Staying at 1300m then told at the finish second up. He took a while to get himself organised before coming again through the line. That lays a nice platform for the mile third up.

How to play it: Kintyre to win

Race 8 - 4:45PM THE NEWCASTLE HERALD HUNTER (1300 METRES)

1. Mazu has a depth to his form lines none of his rivals can match. It's a near identical preparation to that of Lost And Running, the winner of this race two years ago. The preparation has been a disaster for Mazu so far but he by far gets the best set up on Saturday he's had all spring.

Dangers: Joe Pride's front runner 6. Coal Crusher was an all-the-way winner at this meeting over this trip 12 months ago. That was in the BM88 though. Has form through the right races this time back and we know exactly where he'll be in the run. Blinkers again. 17. Military Expert sets up well first up over 1400m on a dry track.

How to play it: Mazu to win

Race 9 - 5:20PM NZB KURT FEARNEY LEGEND MILE BENCHMARK 78 HANDICAP (1600 METRES)

11. Tavi Time should have won first up. It wasn't a pretty watch. The four-year-old found himself in a horrible position after copping a squeeze in the early stages. Instead of being in behind the leaders he was out the back pegged away on the fence.

He went to the line with the hand break on yet still wasn't beaten far.

Dangers: 8. Sweet Mercy burst through the pack to win the Four Pillars two weeks ago. That's what she is capable of when she runs up to her best. Can't see why she won't hold that form now fourth up to the mile.

How to play it: Tavi Time to win

Race 10 - 5:55PM 2024 TAB KARAKA MILLIONS BENCHMARK 94 HANDICAP (1300 METRES)

1. Much Much Better was a brave all the way winner at Randwick four weeks ago. Looks well placed out to 1300m now for the flying Sara Ryan stable.

Wouldn't say this is any harder than last start despite it being a BM94. That sees the free striding grey well in after the claim of apprentice hoop Anna Roper. It was Roper who rode him last start, and that was her first ride aboard Much Much Better.

Dangers: 6. Phearson paired off with Grebeni to fight out the finish in the Goulburn Cup last start. There was three lengths back to Another One in third.

That was on the back of a complete forget first up.

He got chopped out for a run behind Airman. 4. Fender was only fair in the Barn Dance but it was always going to be tricky from the draw. He also lumped 61kg.

How to play it: Much Much Better to win

1. MAJOR TIME (P Weta) 68 478 12 5222.25

Raced three wide when 's' nix win of 11 (3) $1400 58.5 Master Joe, Look Only 1000m Queensland Open (Bm85) Good3 Oct 29. Timed run well to score at Queensland first-up. Fitter Can be a contender.

2. FANGELA (R Dwyer) 66 20 6 6 3167.05: Good sight 's' len 2nd of 3 (1) $200 60.0 Zourata 100m Waggap (Bm85) Good3 Nov 3. Closed from well back to fill the minor at short odds to Waggap last start in the main. BIG DAY OUT (Craig Weeding) 56 72 11 13 3244.49: Began awkwardly bumped rival when 2 1/2 len 6th of 8 (2) $180 0.00 56.0 Quick 1000m Waggap (Bm84) Soft3 Nov 7. Wast! all that far away at Randwick last outing. Good drive. Among the danger.

3. SMUGGLER'S BAY (John Nisbett) 66 21 12 1 5130.35: Raced four wide when 1 1/2 len 4th of 15 (3) $1000 59.0 Major Time 1000m Queensland Open (Bm85) Good3 Oct 29. Just behind the placegetters at Queensland last time out. Keep safe.

5. LIPSTICK SWING (T P Donnelly) 58 95 0 0 5750.05: Sent forward when sht led win of 11 (3) $850 55.0 Hardware Lane, Grimsa 1000m Albany Open (Bm88) Soft3 May 12. Had the benefit of 1 1/2 len 4th 400m Rhythm 1000m Waggap (Bm85) Hard3 Jan 10. First up. Won in 1 1/2 len company at Narandera first-up last campaign. Free-running. Expect will be prominent from the decent draw in the mix.

6. MR MOPPETT (R D Parcell) 66 30 0 0 6169.83: Struck interference at start when 3 1/2 len 4th of 14 (3) $100 50.0 50.0 175m Albany Open (Bm94) Soft3 May 23. Prepared for this with 1/2 len win at Mt Oatley. Very handy 900m Corowa barrier trial Good3 Nov 8. Resuming. Previously trained by P A Swenney. Generally competitive fresh. Not out of this.

7. ZOURATA (A L Corbett) 64 94 10 0 578.35: Led out in straight when 1 1/2 len 1st of 12 (2) $220 55.0 Fongela, Epilora 1000m Waggap (Bm85) Good3 Nov 1. Charged through back at short odds at Waggap at latest. Looks to be the main chance.

8. GORUSH LIGHTNING (Michael Gatty) 56 64 10 1 5250.58: On pace len 2nd of 10 (1) $100 50.0 50.0 100m 425m Moryua Open (Bm80) Good4 Aug 20. Did up. Veteran campaigner. Nice performer.

9. FANTINI (R Dwyer) 66 19 2 1 5133.35: Bumped rival, eased near 800m, wide near 600m when 6 1/2 len last of 8 (3) $100 0.00 52.0 Quick 1000m Waggap (Bm84) Soft3 Nov 7. Coming off an average run at Randwick last time.

10. BOLD OFF (A L McRae) 58 205 2 1 5931.68: Began awkwardly when 2 1/2 len 5th of 11 (3) $350 53.0 Major Time 200m Queensland Open (Bm85) Good3 Oct 29. Fair effort without threatening at Queensland last outing. Place hope.

11. LONDON GALT (Scott Gilling) 66 234 3 5 50.00: Took up the running when first-up len 2nd of 6 (1) $40 59.0 Yendy 1200m Gungahlin (Bm66) Good4 Nov 5. Solid on-pace performance at Gungahlin first up. Will only be fitter. Will need some back from a lucky gate. Knockout chance.

12. SHARP NOSE (Matthew Reilly) 56 126 1 2 5710.45: Began awkwardly when 2 1/2 len 5th of 8 (3) $240 63.0 King Charles 1000m Sapphire Coast (Bm58) (C2+) Soft3 June 11. Resuming. One for exotics.

ON SKY RACING 1
The Hound says: HARA'S SKYE (1) is suited coming into this fresh, prolific winner who is drawn to hold a spot and take plenty of beating. RUSHFORTH ALLEY (3) does go quickly when hitting the ground and has been airborne at Grafton in recent weeks. FAHEY'S MAGIC (4) is a city winner in flyng time and ON MIMME (5) can threaten with a clear run from the draw

CANBERRA LIFE AS WE KNOW IT

North Pole Lane arrives in Canberra

FROM midwifery to making Christmas magic happen - Mindy Dominick knows a lot about joy.

The Canberra Hospital midwife and breast cancer survivor has brought the North Pole to the national capital. And she couldn't be happier.

Taking a break from her midwifery career, Ms Dominick first brought the immersive Christmas experience to Canberra last year.

"We knew that we wanted to come back this year, and to give people so many new reasons to come and make special memories," she said.

"It's basically the story of what it might be like to go and see Santa at the North Pole."

Now located at Majura Park, North Pole Lane is a 600sqm all-Christmas experience for the entire family.

New attractions include a talking, moving Rudolph the red-nosed reindeer, a special area for story time and a snow garden with giant, moving butterflies.

Children (and their parents) enter North Pole Lane via Santa's library and step into a world like no other: from the elves at their wrapping station to the North Pole Lane post office. And then of course there's the big man in red - Santa Claus.

Young performers from throughout Canberra are taking turns being the characters in the event, which Ms Dominick says is a "theatrical performance".

"This has been on my mind for about 10 years and I just wanted to bring it to fruition," she said.

"Last year I had opportunity and we started. This year is bigger and better.

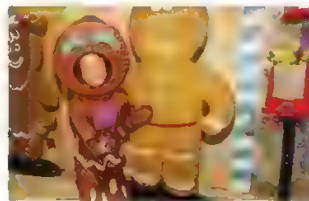

"We have lots of actors, so it's quite theatrical. We have a princess with her polar bear Mishka in our snow forest. We have a snow garden, which is actually blooming, which is really beautiful.

"We have a train station, we have Santa, of course. We have a post office so you can write a letter to Santa and this year you can get a letter that Santa will write back to you.

"It's just a wonderful experience to create Christmas memories with."

Caitlyn Hunt, 10, plays a Gingerbread Man at North Pole Lane.

Two-year-old Tori Element was in her element.

Abbey Heather, 14, plays a winter princess.

Among the many friendly faces are Mrs Claus (aka midwife Christine Bain), who will welcome the families through the wooden doors of North Pole Lane.

"This year, the Christmas spirit is alive here at North Pole Lane," she said.

North Pole Lane is not in the main Majura Park shopping centre, but in a new section next to Kitchen Warehouse at 10 Catalina Drive.

Canberra Airport spokeswoman Melissa Evans was excited to welcome North Pole Lane to the Majura Park shopping precinct.

"Located next to the recently-opened Kitchen Warehouse, North Pole Lane is the ultimate Canberra Christmas must-see," she said.

Exploring North Pole Lane takes around 60 minutes. Photos with Santa - right at home in his lounge room - are available for purchase while at the experience.

North Pole Lane is open from November 25 to December 24.

It is a ticketed event with tickets available from eventbrite.com.

Prices are:

Children under 2 - free
Children 3-17 years - $16.67
Adults 18+ years - $21.86
Family of four - $63.41

Lions Youth Haven's Westwood Farm open day on Saturday

LIONS Youth Haven has been just that - a haven for youth in Canberra - for the past 35 years.

It is a registered, not-for-profit organisation owned and supported by the Lions Clubs in Canberra and Queanbeyan. Its location is Westwood Farm on the Kambah Pool Road, comprising 200 hectares bounded by nature reserves and national parks.

On the farm, kids in crisis can find support, homeless young people have somewhere to live, struggling students get a chance to reset, young people with disabilities can go into shared accommodation and those who need it are taught the skills to become productive members of society. It's a lot.

And this weekend, the beauty and purpose of the Lions Youth Haven is being shared with the community through a special open day on Saturday.

At the farm open day, there will be a range of activities on offer for all age groups. Guests can feed the friendly farm animals, go for a ride on a farm buggy, try their hand at whip cracking, get creative with some nature crafts, go on a scavenger hunt or just relax and enjoy the beautiful scenery and a delicious meal.

There will also be fun displays of environmental science projects.

The open day is a free event.

A sausage sizzle or cafe meals will be available for purchase on the day.

There is a picnic area, so don't forget the picnic rug. Members of the ACT Woodcraft Guild will also be offering free tours of their workshop at the farm throughout the day.

Ella, a year nine student from Calwell High, who attended a farm skills program at the Lions Youth Haven said she enjoyed every minute.

"There are so many things here that I wouldn't have been able to do if it wasn't for this program," she said.

"It's kind of calming for me to come out here because it takes me away from all the stress of school and all that sort of stuff. It takes the stress and anxiety out of my life."

The open day is from 11am to 3pm on Saturday at 244 Kambah Pool Road, Kambah.

MILITARY MISSION Israel defends raid of key Gaza hospital sheltering patients

'No hiding for murderers of Hamas'

Khan Younis

ISRAELI troops have stormed into Gaza's largest hospital, searching for traces of Hamas inside and beneath the facility, where newborns and hundreds of other patients have suffered for days without electricity and other basic necessities. The forces also pressed on with their wider ground offensive.

Details from the day-long raid remained sketchy, but officials from Israel and Gaza presented different accounts of what was happening at the Al-Shifa Hospital in Gaza City - the Israeli army released videos showing soldiers carrying boxes labelled as "baby food" and "medical supplies", while health officials talked of terrified staff and patients as troops moved through the buildings.

After encircling Al-Shifa for days, Israel faced pressure to prove its claim that Hamas had turned the hospital into a command centre and used patients, staff and civilians sheltering there to provide cover for its militants. The allegation is part of Israel's broader accusation that Hamas uses Palestinians as human shields. Israel released videos early on Thursday of weapons it said it found in one building, but so far its search showed no signs of tunnels or a sophisticated command centre.

The raid has drawn condemnation from the United Nations, Jordan and the West Bank's Palestinian Authority, which called it a violation of international law. Separately, the UN Security Council approved a resolution calling for "humanitarian pauses and corridors" throughout Gaza after four failed attempts to respond to the Israel-Hamas war.

There is no hiding, no shelter, no refuge for the murderers of Hamas.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu

Hamas and Gaza health officials deny militants operate from Al-Shifa - a hospital that employs some 1500 people and has more than 500 beds, according to the Palestinian news agency. Palestinians and rights groups say Israel has recklessly endangered civilians as it seeks to eradicate Hamas.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told troops at the Zikim military base near north Gaza on Thursday: "There is no place in Gaza that Israel will not reach." Standing next to soldiers at the base, Netanyahu said: "There is no hiding, no shelter, no refuge for the murderers of Hamas. We will arrive and eliminate Hamas and return our abductees - these are two sacred missions."

As Israel tightens its hold on northern Gaza, leaders have talked of expanding the ground operation into the south to root out Hamas. Most of Gaza's 2.3 million people have already crowded into the territory's south, where a worsening fuel shortage threatens to paralyse the delivery of humanitarian services and shut down mobile phone and internet service.

Conditions in southern Gaza have been deteriorating as bombardment continues to level buildings. Residents say bread is scarce and supermarket shelves are bare. Families cook on wood fires for lack of fuel. Central electricity and running water have been out for weeks across Gaza.

After refusing to allow fuel into Gaza since the war's start, saying it would be diverted to Hamas, Israeli defence have let in some 24,000 litres. The fuel will only be used for the UN agency for Palestinian refugees, known as UNRWA, to continue bringing limited supplies of food and medicine from Egypt for the more than 600,000 people sheltering in UN-run schools and other facilities in the south.

The fuel cannot be used for hospitals or to desalinate water, said Thomas White, UNRWA's director in Gaza. The amount was the equivalent of "only 9 per cent of what we need daily to sustain lifesaving activities", he said.

The war between Israel and Hamas erupted after the militant group killed some 1200 people and seized around 240 captives in an October 7 attack that shattered Israelis' sense of security.

Israeli airstrikes have since killed more than 11,200 people, two-thirds of them women and minors, according to the Palestinian Health Ministry in Ramallah, which co-ordinates with the ministry branch in Hamas-ruled Gaza. Another 2700 have been reported missing, with most believed to be buried under the rubble.

Al-Shifa's sick, scared questioned by troops

Gaza

ISRAELI forces launched their raid into the large Al-Shifa compound around 2am and remained on the grounds after nightfall on Wednesday, with tanks stationed outside and snipers on nearby buildings, Munir al-Boursh, a senior official with Gaza's Health Ministry inside the hospital, told reporters.

Al-Boursh said that for hours, the troops ransacked the basement and other buildings, including those housing the emergency and surgery departments, and searched the grounds for tunnels. Troops questioned and face-screened patients, staff and people sheltering in the facility, he said, adding that he did not know if any were detained. "Patients, women and children are terrified," he said.

Neither the Palestinians nor the military reported any clashes inside the hospital. The military said its troops killed four militants outside the hospital at the start of the operation. Israel said it was carrying out a "precise and targeted operation against Hamas in a specified area in the hospital", and that its soldiers were accompanied by medical teams bringing in incubators and other supplies.

A video released by the military from inside Al-Shifa showed three duffel bags it said it found hidden around an MRI lab, each containing an assault rifle, grenades and Hamas uniforms, as well as a closet that contained a number of assault rifles without ammunition clips. A laptop was also discovered and taken for study. The military said the search was continuing.

Only a quarter of region's hospitals still operating, WHO says

Geneva

ONLY a quarter of Gaza's hospitals are still functioning, with about 26 out of 36 institutions now closed - either because they have been damaged or because they have run out of fuel, the World Health Organisation says.

The United Nations health agency has lost contact with health workers at the Al-Shifa hospital, the largest in Gaza, WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said in Geneva. He said the Israeli military raid of the institution was "totally unacceptable".

Approximately 82 bodies from Al-Shifa were buried in a mass grave on Wednesday, with another 80 bodies left unburied, said Rik Peepkorn, WHO's representative in the West Bank and Gaza. He said 45 patients were receiving dialysis and that there were no central supplies of oxygen, water or fuel.

Peepkorn said several organisations, including the WHO, were "urgently exploring the possibility of an evacuation of patients and medical staff". He called for a plan to evacuate 2000 critically ill patients out of Gaza over the next three months, possibly to Egypt.

Meanwhile, around 40 patients a day are flooding the Awda Hospital in the Jabaliya area of northern Gaza, said Ahmed Mhanna, the hospital's manager.

Awda Hospital was still operating but the facility's main generator was no longer functioning, he said, and the hospital was still delivering around 20 babies each day.

"The situation is critical," he said in a recorded message. Jabaliya has been heavily bombed since October 7.

Mhanna said that Israel strikes were still pounding the areas immediately around the hospital, with shrapnel striking the building. Eight staff members have been injured from the bombing, he added.

The UN has warned in recent days that it will soon have to halt humanitarian operations as fuel stocks become fully depleted, even with news that some tankers have been allowed in.

Biden says real progress in talks with Xi

San Francisco

US PRESIDENT Joe Biden and Chinese leader Xi Jinping have agreed to resume military-to-military communications and co-operate on anti-drug policies, two major outcomes from their first face-to-face talks in a year.

Biden and Xi met for about four hours on the outskirts of San Francisco and covered pressure points that have contributed to strained US-China relations.

Beijing said the leaders agreed to resume military contacts China severed after then-House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi visited Taiwan in 2022. US and China's militaries have had a number of near-misses and acrimonious exchanges over the past year.

Biden and Xi also agreed to co-operate on addressing the source of the opioid fentanyl, a leading cause of drug overdoses in the US. Under the agreement, China will go directly after specific chemical companies that make fentanyl precursors, a senior US official told reporters.

Xi sought to reassure Biden about Chinese intentions toward democratic Taiwan, which China claims as its territory, saying China had no plans for military action against Taiwan in coming years. Yet he did lay out conditions where the use of force could be used, the US official said. Biden asked China to respect Taiwan's electoral process.

Biden welcomed the Chinese leader at Filoli estate, a country house and gardens about 48km south of San Francisco, where they later attended a summit of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum.

Biden said the US and China had to ensure competion between them "does not veer into conflict" and manage their relationship responsibly. He said issues such as climate change, counter-narcotics and the rise of artificial intelligence demanding joint attention.

After a morning session of talks and before heading into lunch with Xi, Biden said on social media platform X it was vital they understood each other leader to leader. "There are critical global challenges that demand our joint leadership. And today, we made real progress," he said. After lunch, the leaders took a short walk in the manicured garden of the mansion following an interaction that lasted around four hours. A White House statement said the leaders "held a candid and constructive discussion on a range of bilateral and global issues and exchanged views on areas of difference".

Xi called the US-China relationship "the most important bilateral relationship in the world" and said he and Biden shouldered heavy responsibilities. "For two large countries like China and the United States, turning their back on each other is not an option," he said. "It is unrealistic for one side to remodel the other and conflict and confrontation has unbearable consequences for both sides."

Court rules against UK plan to send asylum seekers to Rwanda

London

THE British government says it will still try to send some migrants on a one-way trip to Rwanda, despite the UK Supreme Court ruling that the contentious plan is unlawful because asylum-seekers will not be safe in the African country.

In a major blow to one of Prime Minister Rishi Sunak's key policies, the country's top court ruled on Wednesday that asylum-seekers sent to Rwanda would be "at real risk of ill-treatment" because they could be returned to the conflict-wracked home countries they'd fled.

Sunak, who has pledged to stop migrants reaching Britain in small boats across the English Channel, said the ruling "was not the outcome we wanted" but vowed to press on with the plan and send the first deportation flights to Rwanda by next northern spring. He said the court had "confirmed that the principle of removing asylum-seekers to a safe third country is lawful", even as it ruled Rwanda unsafe.

Sunak said the government would seal a legally binding treaty with Rwanda that would address the court's concerns, and would then pass a law declaring Rwanda a safe country. He suggested that if legal challenges to the plan continued, he was prepared to consider leaving international human rights treaties - a move that would draw strong opposition and international criticism.

Britain and Rwanda signed a deal in April 2022 to send migrants who arrive in the UK as stowaways or in boats to the East African country, where their asylum claims would be processed and, if successful, they would stay.

Britain's government argues that the policy will deter people from risking their lives crossing one of the world's busiest shipping lanes, and will break the business model of people-smuggling gangs. No one has yet been sent to the country as the plan was challenged in the courts.

Opposition politicians, refugee groups and human rights organisations say the plan is unethical and unworkable. Charity ActionAid UK called the Supreme Court ruling a vindication of "British values of compassion and dignity".

Pepsi being sued over plastic pollution

New York

NEW York state is suing PepsiCo in an effort to hold the soft drink and snack food giant partly responsible for litter that winds up in bodies of water supplying the city of Buffalo with drinking water.

The lawsuit, filed in state Supreme Court by Attorney-General Letitia James, accuses the company and its Frito-Lay subsidiaries of creating a public nuisance by making a huge number of plastic bottles and wrappers, some of which inevitably end up in the Buffalo River when they are discarded. Simply by making so much plastic, the company is hurting the environment, the lawsuit argues.

"No company is too big to ensure that their products do not damage our environment and public health. All New Yorkers have a basic right to clean water, yet PepsiCo's irresponsible packaging and marketing endanger Buffalo's water supply, environment and public health," James said in a statement.

In reply, PepsiCo that it was serious about "plastic reduction and effective recycling", although the company didn't directly comment on the lawsuit's claim that it was legally responsible for keeping garbage out of the Buffalo River.

PepsiCo, which is headquartered in New York, produces and packages at least 85 different beverage brands and at least 25 snack food brands that mostly come in plastic containers meant to be thrown away or recycled once empty.

Litter from many sources end up in the Buffalo River, but the Attorney-General's office said a 2022 survey named PepsiCo as the single largest identifiable contributor to its plastic waste.

James wants PepsiCo to warn customers about the potential health and environmental risks of its packaging. It also wants the court to force the company to develop a plan to keep its packaging out of the Buffalo River. The lawsuit, filed on Wednesday, also seeks financial penalties and restitution.

Worsening sand, dust storms driving land loss

Uzbekistan

THE world is losing almost one million square kilometres of productive land a year to sand and dust storms made worse by human activities, the United Nations body in charge of fighting desertification warns.

The UN Convention to Combat Desertification (UNCCD) said an estimated two billion tonnes of sand and dust entered the atmosphere every year, wreaking havoc across large parts of Asia and Africa and causing significant economic damage throughout the world.

In a report released on Thursday during a meeting in Samarkand, Uzbekistan, UNCCD said at least a quarter of the storms could be attributed to human activities, including over-mining and overgrazing.

Topsoil losses were not only having an impact on food supplies in some of the world's most vulnerable countries, but were also driving up migration and security risks.

Labor blindsided by detention ruling

LABOR'S attempts to stonewall questions over the release of at least 83 immigration detention detainees on Thursday were a vain attempt to deflect attention away from how badly it has bungled this issue.

While, as was to be expected, the opposition pulled out all its organ stops during question time, much of the criticism was - for once - justified.

The first duty of any government is to keep its citizens safe. You don't do that by releasing convicted murderers, sex offenders and other criminals into the community on short notice and with apparently very limited supervision.

This apparently has happened because the government failed to consider the possibility a legal challenge by a Rohingya man, a convicted child sex offender, against indefinite immigration detention might succeed.

The Immigration Minister Andrew Giles and the Home Affairs Minister Clare O'Neil were clearly completely blindsided by the High Court ruling that indefinite detention was illegal last Wednesday.

That ruling takes precedence over a previous High Court finding it was legal for the government to detain people indefinitely "so long as they were removed from Australia as soon as reasonably practicable".

The Canberra Times

TO SERVE THE NATIONAL CITY AND THROUGH IT THE NATION

Up to 93 detainees may be affected by the decision.

The latest decision appears to hinge on the fact no other country is willing to take a significant number of the people in immigration detention with the result they had no prospect of being released.

While this finding is sensible, defensible and just, it has fallen foul of the law of unintended consequences.

Because the government had not considered the possibility the ruling may go against it, ministers have been left scrambling to catch up ever since.

It was made apparent during question time on Thursday that no thought had been given to how former detainees would be housed, supervised and regulated until after the decision had been announced.

As a result of this lack of foresight at least 83 people, the majority of whom were in detention after completing jail sentences, failing the character requirements for release into the community or on national security grounds, are now at liberty.

It is understood that up to 93 detainees may be affected by the judgement.

Reports have already emerged government assurances visa conditions had been imposed and that suitable controls had been put in place before individuals were released are, at best, questionable.

At least some of the former detainees have been given letters stating that "at least for now" their status was "an unlawful non citizen".

This makes a mockery of claims by the Foreign Minister Penny Wong that detainees had been placed on bridging visas that allow them to be monitored and to keep the community safe.

And, worse still, there have been reports a number of Western Australian detainees were bussed to a motel and left free to roam with little or no visible supervision.

That's just not good enough. It's also why the government has been cobbling together hastily conceived legislation that would give it the power to use ankle bracelets and curfews to control the movements of high risk former detainees.

Given such draconian measures are anathema to many crossbenchers and the Greens the government needs the support of the opposition to pass its legislation.

The opposition, however, argues the measures don't go far enough and say the former detainees should be rounded up and put back in detention.

An own goal by the Albanese government has left it with little bargaining power and a limited range of options.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Canberra paused to remember in a restrained and proper way

SATURDAY'S Remembrance Day observance at the AWM was magnificent. Located for several years in the Sculpture Garden, it has again become what it should always be; a relatively simple ceremony allowing the memory of those who died, and suffered in and subsequent to all wars, to be the feature.

It has been pared down to respect and honour those people, many of whom are still among us.

The ADF contribution was (as always) superb. Music, catafalque party, Adjutants to the G-G. It was appropriately small. Approximately 20 at the most. Additional ADF personnel attended to represent the Services. They were seated in the general viewing area. Not too many as to dominate (as has occurred in earlier years).

With the service to be held again from next year in the larger front courtyard, please continue with the small "official party" and ADF presence.

Remembrance Day is for all of us in the community to attend. Not to feel that we are tolerated at an ADF and political event.

One state solution?

Last weekend (November 11 and 12) speakers from both Israeli and Palestinian public gatherings spoke in favour of the "one state solution" for the region. The "two state solution" is dead.

The best way forward would be one state with Jews, Palestinians and others all living in harmony.

This was the case for centuries under the Ottoman Empire. Unfortunately following the granting of the British mandate after World War I this changed.

English views on the special relationship between Britain and the Holy Land, coupled with European guilt over the Holocaust, has lead to the present mess.

While a one state solution is the only fair outcome it is difficult to see how it might be achieved under the current right wing Israeli government and in the face of western indifference.

Brumbies must go

In reply to Jeffrey Hersch (Letters, November 12) a wise government shows responsibility by preserving the environment.

The Australian Alpine region is protected by a ban on grazing. One can imagine the anger if a destructive pest were not suppressed merely because it is decorative.

Fortunately the NSW government is responsible. It is caring for this unique natural region by suppressing equine invaders.

Ocean currents matter

I refer to French President Emmanuel Macron's call for unity in the fight against climate change ("Macron issues heated call for climate unity", November 13).

A vitally important part of that fight must be to prevent the collapse of the Antarctic Circumpolar Current (ACC), which connects the Pacific, Atlantic and Indian Oceans, and has considerable influence on Earth's climate.

If the ACC were to collapse warm waters from the Pacific and Indian Oceans would greatly accelerate the melting of the Antarctic ice cap.

This would adversely affect Earth's climate, particularly in the southern hemisphere. It would also increase sea levels, inundation of low-lying land, and coastal erosion.

Mr Macron is absolutely right: there is an urgent need for worldwide unity in the fight against climate change. It should begin with

Canberra got it wrong

As you are most aware, the ACT was the only state or territory to vote "yes" in the recent referendum.

I live in the Northern Territory and it's sad that the people of ACT voted this way.

Why? Because many of you work for the politicians who govern Australia. It's obvious that your sinecured mindset has absolutely zero idea about what's the real problem throughout the rest of Australia.

I've been in Australia for almost 60 years.

Over this time I've seen billions of dollars channelled to the so-called disadvantaged with no effect whatsoever.

Education is the answer to the problem but unfortunately there's no penalty for non-attendance at school.

I have some good friends who are Aboriginal. They all live in settlements and are good people. But their children quickly turn to alcohol and crime as there's no consequences to curb their behaviour.

classical anti-Semitic tropes.

Members of Congress receive donations from a wide range of people and causes. But apparently when Jews do it, that leads to control.

Rex should instead consider that the UK, US and Australian politicians support Israel because they understand it is a liberal democracy with equal right for all its citizens.

They know it has the right to defend itself against terrorism.

They realise it is surrounded by Iranian proxies determined to destroy it. And they are well aware there can never be peace while the genocidal terrorist group Hamas controls Gaza.

Alan Shroot, Forrest

Eye of the beholder

Declan McGrath (Letters November 13) worries about the ABC's blatant pro-Hamas bias in its reporting of the Israel/Gaza war.

That reminds of a US TV news producers observation that: "If you see a media story that accords with your view, it is clearly balanced and impartial. If it is in disaccord with your view, it is obviously biased. Of course, it goes without saying that you, the public, are always impartial and never prejudiced".

Particularly apposite I feel since Ian considered the ABC coverage of the Voice was equally "biased" - guess which way?

Finally, in comparing the ABC unfavourably with what he regards as the BBC's "balanced" coverage, Declan might like to know that it too has come under strong fire for its alleged anti-Israel stance.

So, how much of both public broadcasters' coverage is Declan actually watching and, importantly, "impartially" absorbing?

Save the Coorong

Many years ago, while visiting South Australia, I was struck by the natural beauty of the Coorong National Park. Many will remember the iconic film Storm Boy.

This unique region once had an abundance of thriving birdlife and wetland vegetation. Unfortunately, many wildlife species have been lost due to the ravages of drought over the past decade.

Climate change is affecting the river system feeding into the Coorong, but Gloria Jones from the River, Lakes and Coorong Action Group says this is not the only problem.

The aims of the Water Act must also be observed. One aim of this legislation is to "protect, restore and provide for the ecological values and ecosystem services of the Murray Darling Basin".

Water buybacks should take into account the needs of all stakeholders, including local and indigenous communities. We need to protect the health of the Murray-Darling river system.

Give peace a chance

With the carnage and atrocities in the Middle East it is telling that on other occasions when peoples sought freedom and justice their aims were often achieved through organised, and mostly orderly, protest.

Mahatma Gandhi in India, Nelson Mandela in South Africa and Martin Luther King in the USA did not resort to armed insurrection and brutal violence.

Terrorist groups such as Hamas, Hezbollah, Daish and the rest exist to gain total control over people's lives and to subject them to their ideology.

The Palestinians are being unfairly subjected to a catastrophic and apocalyptic war undertaken by Hamas and Israel. There is no regard for human suffering by either side.

Learning from China's economic model

DURING a Shanghai press conference at the end of his recent long awaited China trip, Prime Minister Anthony Albanese reflected on his very first visit to the city. Back then, he recalled climbing a tower and observing a mostly agrarian landscape across the Huangpu River.

The view today is one of the most dazzling, almost futuristic cityscapes on the planet.

Many Western policy makers are still of the mind that there is little to learn from these developments, other than the fact that they involved private initiative.

Geopolitics has undoubtedly played into this.

One Foreign Policy magazine writer distilled the fears of many here, warning that party members in China "who believe in the need to go back to collective economic ownership might take control, transform China into a real communist country, and promote world revolution."

In my view, too much energy has been wasted debating whether the capitalist or socialist label more accurately describes the Chinese economy. It is unclear why this question matters.

What we know is that China's economy consists of uniquely regulated labour and financial markets, and a relatively large number of state-owned enterprises (SOEs).

Now this collection of SOEs appears to be at odds with a central idea in economics textbooks. The idea says governments need only consider intervening in economies when markets are plagued by structural inefficiencies.

Chinese SOEs make lots of money in sectors such as housing construction, life insurance, and steel production - and in many more otherwise competitive, and quite efficient, markets. So, many economists argue these SOEs are distorting the overall efficient use of scarce resources by private enterprise.

Anthony Albanese was in Shanghai earlier this month. Pictures AAP

But this reasoning falsely imagines private markets as default arenas of human interaction that were somehow in place before governments ever entered the picture.

The existence of the market for tradable water rights across the Murray-Darling Basin is, like that of other major markets, as much of a policy choice as the decision to vest small groups of public transport officials with the authority to add or remove train and bus stops based on judgements about social need.

A more useful way to think about China's economy is to evaluate its important institutions as they exist.

We can then ask if there are any lessons for Australia.

For example, Chinese SOEs tend to protect employment in the sense that it is harder for them to fire their workers. However, the SOEs usually have two employment tracks: one protected, and the other market based, where employment is more flexible.

This hybrid arrangement has recently had the effect of paying higher salaries on average compared to the private sector.

At a time when Australia is attempting to attract and retain talent in its own public and private sectors, China's SOEs are a timely case study.

They show it is possible to make vital work financially worthwhile with proactive government investment, without cementing a "jobs for life" ethos, or fuelling inflation.

Australia can also learn from China's financial markets.

Foreign investment in large Chinese enterprises through financial markets is more tightly controlled than Australian Securities Exchange players are used to, but it is still allowed.

Many large institutional investors, for example, trade an approved category of shares on the Stock Exchange of Hong Kong, through China's Stock Connect program. They can buy and sell these shares at the same prices as local Chinese investors do, with prices converted from renminbi to Hong Kong dollars at the market exchange rate.

The two major Chinese stock exchanges, in Shanghai and Shenzhen, treat all such orders from Hong Kong as if they came from a giant fund. The Hong Kong Stock Exchange treats all orders from outside China in the same manner.

Interestingly, the absolute size of the difference between the inward and outward flows of these and other securities (or the net capital flow) is, in principle, subject to a non-binding regulatory cap. This means there has tended to be a bias in favour of capital inflows.

Over recent years, we have seen that foreign investors have, at the end of the day, often ended up buying vastly less Australian financial assets than Australian investors have ended up buying in financial assets abroad.

If this imbalance becomes too pronounced, it can cause problems for the value of the currency and trigger further outflows of capital. China's regulatory innovations have allowed it to lessen these risks.

The fact that foreign investors can take money out of Australian financial markets in more of a "no questions asked" fashion makes our politicians relatively less free to pursue programs involving significant public spending.

Moreover, the Chinese system demonstrates that when most enterprises operate under competition, it may not much matter whether state or private investors own those enterprises. In the presence of financial markets, they do not seem to care whether they invest in private enterprises or SOEs. They may still lend money even if they cannot hold shares.

Australians have been debating whether our private sector has been too slow to build new dwellings and drive energy transitions. China's experience shows that, in considering the advantages of government ownership as one way to address these problems, a chronic lack of investment does not have to be an inevitable downside.

If we can get beyond the scaremongering rhetoric, there are a wealth of insights to be gained from China's economic system.

IF YOU stopped any Canberran on the street and asked them if they thought lifting building standards was a good idea, they'd likely, and very reasonably say "yes".

The Property Council agrees.

If the conversation continued, we'd also likely agree that Canberrans deserve quality homes to house its growing population, and that better consumer protections and tools that promote transparency would be a good thing for the community.

Knowing this, the ACT government is attempting to achieve these noble and agreeable outcomes.

Yet its proposed solution - a new developer licensing regime - is akin to a policy missile being used to crack open a nut.

And if implemented, it will increase the cost of new homes in Canberra.

Unamended, the government's developer licensing regime goes far beyond the issue it is trying to address.

Instead, it will directly dent investment in new stock, increase the cost of new homes and increase our rents in Canberra.

If applied, the regime will mean a company director could be issued a personal rectification order for a future defect that their development company did not cause.

But this doesn't just apply to your big end-of-town developments that build the majority of our homes, this will also apply to the family investor.

Anyone that develops a property for profit will face personal liability.

This will mean if anyone from the community wants to develop an investment property, they will face personal liability and could face significant personal ramifications including potential bankruptcy.

This untested shift in responsibility not seen in any other jurisdiction will create a bizarre legal burden that would be unique and uniquely costly to our territory.

Consider this example: Let's say you buy a car from a manufacturer, and drive it happily for a year, rightly having it serviced with your local mechanic.

Following the service, it emerges your brakes weren't appropriately serviced, and you have an accident. It would make sense to then pursue a course of action with that local mechanic.

But if we apply the regime model to this example, you'd instead be able to personally pursue the director of the car company's manufacturer. It doesn't make legal sense or pass a logic test.

The potential impact of the personal liability in the proposed regime is that it will deter investment by making the risk unacceptably high for directors and institutional investors.

It will also seriously impact our ability to achieve the missing middle and deter individuals wanting to develop new properties through the RZ2 or RZ1 rules.

Additionally, it's highly unlikely to succeed. There are only extreme examples in Australia of an ability to pierce the corporate veil and make directors accountable for issues outside of their control.

The Property Council supports a considered approach that looks to the NSW Design and Building Practitioners Act.

This includes accreditation and registration for everyone involved in the building chain without personal liability that deters investment.

If we apply this first-of-its-kind personal liability on developers, it runs the very real danger of reducing residential development, employment, housing supply and affordability. This should not be set up in isolation of the ecosystem of building quality.

When you set up a new scheme in isolation from the rest of the country, that you know will repel investment, you simply add price pressures to homes which are already expensive by national standards.

Building in extra costs to the housing system is an odd decision when housing shortages and high rents are already biting.

We need residential investment and development in Canberra. We need more houses for Canberrans.

And we need to improve the affordability and choice of those houses.

The solution here? First, amend the proposed policy to create a holistic system of protection. That includes bringing the policy in line with other jurisdictions like NSW and Queensland, holding trades such as water proofers to account and require them to be licensed and accountable to defects, and address the 24 recommendations in the Shergold Weir report on building compliance and confidence which is the hallmark for lifting building quality.

That way, we'll have a system of viable and workable protections we can all agree on.

Reshaping the boys' state of mind

Hear me out. Maybe to reach our impressionable boys some more men need to start chucking an Andrew Tate.

JENNA PRICE

I LOVE writing about disgraced men. Partly it's to showcase the error of their ways and partly it's revenge. There is nothing more delicious for an ageing feminist to repeat, endlessly, I told you so.

However. On this occasion. I might just be writing about redemption. About leopards changing their spots (IMHO only possible if they mate with a zebra and wait generations. Stripes beat spots).

It turns out that if we want men, some men, to take a long hard look at themselves, that requires sacking and humiliation.

Let me introduce you to 32-year-old Tom Morris. Nearly two years ago now, his text messages in a private WhatsApp group were leaked. Sexist, misogynistic, racist, homophobic. And that's just the beginning.

It also turned out to be the end of his career - at that stage. Straight white men usually recover - and he has.

He's got a gig with Nine now as its new football reporter starting January next year. And, good news, he's had to sign the same "don't bring harm to the company" clause as everyone else.

I decided to interview Morris after reading the latest report from ANROWS, which researches women's safety. Morris has done a truckload of reading since his ignorance and stupidity were revealed.

I'm a fan of reading but I doubt it was half as useful as his sisters (both primary teachers) shouting at him or his dad and mum being disappointed in him.

Never underestimate the power of parents being disappointed in their children.

"My dad is an extremely respectful man and he was disgusted at what I did and what I said," Morris says.

Turns out quite a few of us should be disappointed in our children. There has never been a time when ANROWS' reports bring me much good news. This one is more dispiriting than ever.

Boys are significantly more likely to hold pro-violence attitudes than girls. (Pro-violence. As the young people say, I can't even.)

Support for gender equality reduces with age, with year 9 boys more likely to hold negative attitudes compared with year 7 boys. (I guess that's when they start to feel peer pressure or are anxious about the share of the pie and look for somewhere to lay blame.)

Boys are less likely than girls and gender diverse students to feel they know what to do if boys sexually harass girls.

Intention to intervene drops by nearly half between year 7 and year 9. (Not that the desire to intervene was all that big in the first palace. In year 7, it's one in five and by year 9 it's a little over one in 10.)

And close to one-third of year 9 boys and over 20 per cent of year 7 boys said it wouldn't bother them if a boy in their class told a sexual joke about a girl in their class.

Reader, I shared these results with Tom Morris. I then asked him if he was planning to go into boys' schools and do a bit of outreach.

Tom Morris, inset, will return to work. Andrew Tate's influence remains strong. Pictures Twitter, AP Jane Lloyd, acting chief executive of ANROWS, tells me boys are struggling. She says there's a view boys are worse than ever, more misogynistic, have less respect.

But she says that's probably the wrong approach, to write off a generation of young men. Develop some empathy and show compassion. (Honestly, this woman has a lot of patience and I clearly need to develop some.)

So what can be done? Here's my idea for Tom Morris. He needs to chuck an Andrew Tate. (Hold on. Hear me out.)

He needs to start going in to schools and talking the good talk. I suggest this to him and at 32, he kind of recoils from the idea of being a preacher. But that's what happens in schools. I ask Jane Lloyd if Morris going in to schools and being an anti-Tate mate is a good idea. She's cautious in her approval.

"Boys need clear pragmatic advice. Nobody likes to be told what to do but they are awash with information [of the wrong kind - Tate, AFL stars, commentators, Parliament House]. It's also the online environments," she says. Also, back my plan here, Morris says fitness is part of his life. Running, cricket. Golf (eyeroll). Body-fit. Six days a week. He could do fitness and anti-misogyny all rolled into one.

Part of the enthusiasm for the Andrew Tates of the world is their promotion of fitness. Why not bundle that in with positive messaging? Morris tells me he despises Andrew Tate - but that shouldn't be a reason to try to emulate the way he reaches young men.

A while ago I suggested men who separated from their wives wear ankle bracelets for surveillance purposes - maybe we should also attach electric shock equipment when men under the age of, say, 100 watch exploitative, harmful porn.

That would be another way of undermining the ways men act out their hatred of women.

The ANROWS report has some good news. Resilience, Rights and Respectful Relationships education programs work (remember, that was the kind of stuff the former federal government tried to undermine). Those programs lead to a decrease in bullying and sexual harassment.

Kate Fitz-Gibbon, professor at Monash and an expert in gendered violence, tells me we must focus on the next generation. We have to work across a range of settings if we want to address pro-violence attitudes, she says.

"We cannot expect one school program alone to achieve generational change - we need to ensure boys encounter programs and messages that promote respect, equality and safety in all of the settings that they work, live and play," she says.

And that's where we can enlist Tom Morris, just in case his commentating career doesn't work out.

Rift over net-zero pledges: report

MANY large companies have made climate promises that are at odds with the environmental impact of their operations and lobbying efforts, data shows.

Independent think tank InfluenceMap, which generates data-driven analysis on how firms behave and talk about climate policy, released research on Thursday to raise the alarm before a global summit.

Many companies have stepped up and now fully disclose net-zero commitments, but transition plans on how they are going to do it lack the level of detail or capital needed to align with limiting global warming to 1.5 degrees. Globally, 58 per cent of the largest corporations were found to have a major rift between climate pledges and company footprint, the think tank found.

Woodside Energy was among those assessed to be at significant risk of "net zero greenwash" because of their efforts to influence governments against phasing out fossil fuels while claiming climate-aligned commitments.

The United Nations has a checklist to prevent greenwashing, or touting false climate credentials to consumers and investors, Governments are failing to progress climate policy at the speed needed, and corporate influence is why.

Will Aitchison, report lead author which states companies with net-zero commitments cannot lobby governments to undermine ambitious climate policy.

Energy giants Chevron, Glencore International and ExxonMobil have also set net zero or similar targets but at the same time want to expand fossil fuel production, researchers found. "Governments are failing to progress climate policy at the speed needed, and corporate influence is a key reason why," lead author Will Aitchison said. "Unless companies match their climate commitments with ambitious support for government-led policy action, the Paris Agreement goals will be impossible to meet."

Released ahead of this year's climate talks, the assessments were made against international benchmarks.

InfluenceMap's metrics for measuring corporate influence over climate policy are used by sustainable investors, including the global Climate Action 100+ initiative that has Australia's biggest emitters on its radar.

The milestone COP28 summit begins in less than two weeks in Dubai, bringing thousands of government and business leaders together, to take stock of progress since the Paris Agreement was formed.

Mirvac's moving from office towers to residential living

MIRVAC intends to be Australia's leading build-to-rent developer while reducing its exposure to office space, its chief executive says.

Mirvac Group CEO and managing director Campbell Hanan told shareholders at the property company's annual general meeting in Sydney on Thursday that it was already making good progress on this pivot.

In October, Mirvac sold a 36-storey office tower at 60 Margaret Street in the heart of Sydney's CBD for $389 million, on top of half a billion in office asset sales in 2022/23. More asset sales are planned, and Mirvac has also deferred $1.8 billion in near-term office redevelopments with a plan to re-lease them in the medium term while waiting for conditions to improve.

Mirvac opened its first build-to-rent project, the 315-unit LIV Indigo, in Sydney in 2020, and its second, the 490-unit LIV Munro, in Melbourne last November.

Its 32-storey, 474-unit LIV

Mirvac is positioning itself to be Australia's leading build-to-rent developer, moving away from office space. Picture AAP

Aston project in Melbourne topped out during the first quarter, while the 498-unit LIV Albert Fields in Melbourne and the 396-unit LIV Anura in Brisbane are under construction.

Mirvac sees the land-lease communities sector as compelling. This involves creating communities for over-55-year-olds, allowing them to downsize from their family home into a resort-style living space with extensive facilities. "Mirvac retains ownership of the land and community facilities, while customers enter into a long-term lease agreement for the land on which their home is located," Mr Hanan said.

Last month, Mirvac and two partners spent $1 billion to acquire a 47.5 per cent stake in the Serenitas land-lease platform, which has more than 6200 sites.

Aussie shares slump amid energy drain

THE local sharemarket has given up its early gains and finished in negative territory, rattled by an apparent gaffe by Joe Biden as well as a domestic jobs report that could help justify another rate hike next year.

The benchmark S&P/ASX200 index was up about 0.3 per cent in morning trading on Thursday, but finished 47.5 points lower, or 0.67 per cent, at 7058.4. The broader All Ordinaries fell 47.2 points, or 0.65 per cent, to 7269.5.

The drop came after the Australian Bureau of Statistics reported that the economy added 55,000 jobs last month, more than double the 24,000 expected. Unemployment did pick up marginally, but only to levels seen in July and August, at 3.7 per cent.

"Today's employment reading won't be what Michele Bullock wanted to see," eToro market analyst Josh Gilbert said. While the reading won't tip the dial towards another rate hike next month, it meant that the RBA would remain hawkish into next year, Mr Gilbert predicted.

Markets were also rattled by an undiplomatic remark by US President Joe Biden, who called China's Xi Jinping a "dictator" hours after a carefully choreographed summit with his Chinese counterpart. Mr Biden's off-the-cuff remark to a reporter as he was leaving a press conference was quickly denounced by Chinese state media and could unravel some of the progress made between the world's two leading powers.

Capital.com analyst Kyle Rodda said the comment sent Asian markets into a "mini-tailspin" and was a "stark reminder that geopolitical risks are never too far away from being a volatility driver".

Eight of the ASX's 11 sectors finished lower and three were higher. The energy sector was the biggest loser, dropping 1.2 per cent as Brent crude fell to a one-week low of $US80 a barrel. Woodside fell 0.8 per cent and Santos dropped 1.9 per cent.

Mineral Resources digs in

WITH a footprint in critical minerals and iron ore, Mineral Resources has deep pockets for further growth as merger activity heats up in the west. "The past 12 months have been the most productive in MinRes' history," managing director Chris Ellison said on Thursday. The balance sheet "remains well-placed to support further growth", the billionaire told shareholders in at the annual general meeting. MinRes has latched on to the battery minerals boom and is one of 50 mid-tier miners that could generate a total of more than $170 billion in GDP by 2040, according to PwC's latest Aussie Mining analysis. But a move into downstream processing was "likely uneconomic" without government assistance, Mr Ellison said. MinRes has a growing stake in lithium takeover target Azure Minerals and is a major stakeholder in Delta Lithium's flagship Mt Ida project.

Brilliant Kohli belts India into final

Cricket: India superstar Virat Kohli hit a record 50th ODI century, describing his landmark as the "perfect picture" as he surpassed the mark he shared with countryman Sachin Tendulkar at the World Cup on Wednesday. Kohli raised his arms then sank to his knees and bowed to the fans with his helmet off after reaching three figures in the hosts' eventually emphatic semi-final triumph against New Zealand at the Wankhede stadium. India will host the winner of last night's Australia-South Africa match in Sunday's final.

Biggs show out to silence Tszyu

Boxing: Reigning champion Dylan Biggs has no plans on playing second fiddle to emerging superstar Nikita Tszyu when the former sparring partners settle a score in Newcastle. The two undefeated super-welterweights will joust for the Australian title on Wednesday night and Biggs is adamant Tszyu won't be stealing his thunder at the Convention Centre. "They can pull the 'he's the pay-per-view star, he's the reason we're selling the card'. But as the belt holder, I walk out second," Biggs said on Thursday.

Giant Manuka fixtures locked in

AUSTRALIAN FOOTBALL

Caden Helmers

A JACK Steele homecoming and the return of the snow Hawks join an Anzac Day blockbuster to round out Canberra's AFL offering in 2024.

Belconnen product Steele's St Kilda will face GWS in an afternoon game at Manuka Oval on April 13, 12 days before the Giants meet beaten grand finalists Brisbane in an Anzac Day clash in Canberra.

The Hawthorn Hawks are the third team to travel to Canberra next year as part of the Giants' $28.5 million deal with the ACT government to bring matches to Manuka Oval.

The Hawks will face GWS on the weekend of August 2-4, returning to the site of their famous snow game four years ago. Those who were there could hardly forget the night of August 9 2019, for what is said to be the first time snow has fallen during a senior VFL/AFL game in league history.

The Giants are entering the second year of a new 10-year, $28.5 million deal to play games in Canberra and wear the city's tourism logo on the back of their playing guernseys.

The partnership, which is an increase on the previous $23 million deal, will ensure the Giants' presence at Manuka Oval will stretch to 20 years with the agreement to run until the end of the 2032 season.

Territory officials hope next year's Anzac Day clash with Brisbane could be one of the biggest drawcards in the partnership's history, with Canberra to be broadcast in a prime time slot on one of the AFL calendar's biggest days.

Channel Seven's Thursday night broadcast is tipped to attract huge ratings following the afternoon's traditional Collingwood-Essendon Anzac Day match, and it sets the scene for a triple-header weekend of football in Canberra.

GWS host a game at Manuka Oval on the Thursday night, before the ACT Brumbies and Canberra Raiders play at Canberra Stadium across the weekend.

The Giants' clash with St Kilda comes a day before the Raiders host the Gold Coast at Canberra Stadium, while the Brumbies' Super Rugby side has a bye.

GWS will get clear air for their third match at Manuka Oval, with the Raiders playing in Belmore and the Super Rugby season run and won.

The league's four northern clubs will host matches to start the season in what has been dubbed "Opening Round", a move fuelled by AFL boss Andrew Dillon's desire to have "footy in every home around the country".

GWS will host Collingwood at Giants Stadium in round one on March 9, which sparked a cheeky jab from premiership-winning Magpies star Mason Cox, who posted on social media website X: "Round 1, NRL goes to Las Vegas. AFL premiers go to... A showground for livestock..."

League to 'wait and see' on openers

AFL

Oliver Caffrey

THE AFL will "wait and see" how the inaugural Opening Round is received before committing to it being a permanent part of the competition's fixture list.

After a stunning surge to the finals this year, Carlton have been rewarded with the most Thursday and Friday night games of any club in 2024.

But fans are still split on the AFL's announcement of a marquee weekend of four games played in Queensland and NSW to begin the season. Carlton and Richmond have regularly opened the AFL season on a Thursday night, but the Blues and Tigers will face the Lions and Suns respectively in Opening Round in 2024.

Those fixtures fall in the same week as the NRL continues round one of its 2024 season with its first matches of the year in Australia, following rugby league's season launch in Las Vegas the previous weekend.

"It's a unique opportunity where we had access to venues where wouldn't ordinarily have access to them," the AFL's broadcast and scheduling boss Josh Bowler told the league's website. "For now let's see how it (Opening Round) goes. We think it's going to be big and we'll reassess heading into the following year."

All clubs will have a bye between rounds 12 and 15. Timeslots have been confirmed up to round 15.

Swan takes flight in full circle return to semi-final in SA

Sophia McCaughan

SYDNEY'S Bella Smith has reflected on the full circle moment as she prepares for a return to her former home ground for Saturday's AFLW semi-final in Adelaide.

Smith played her junior footy for Port Pirie in South Australia, then moved to Norwood Redlegs where she played three seasons for the club in the SANFL before signing for Collingwood in 2021.

As the Swans gear up to face minor premiers Adelaide at Norwood Oval, Smith is thrilled to have her family in attendance, but her primary focus remains on securing a victory.

"I guess a little bit of a 360 for me playing my several years there (Norwood Oval), it's played a big part in my

AFLW SEMI-FINALS

■ Saturday: Adelaide v Sydney, Norwood Oval, 7.40pm.
■ Sunday: Melbourne v Geelong, 3.05pm.

footy career," Smith said.

"To come back there in front of all my family is exciting, but I guess that's not why we're going back there, we're going there to win a game.

"So as good as it is, there's probably a bigger focus."

tions for the do-or-die clash against the Crows.

Smith says the team carries the conviction its recent success is no coincidence, including last week's win on the Gold Coast, emphasising the journey that has led Sydney to its maiden semi-final.

"There is this unwavering belief in the group that we could anything at the moment, four on the trot ... we were in the top eight for a reason and now we're in the top six, so why not," Smith said. It has been an incredible 12-month turnaround for the Swans, going from wooden spooners to semi-finalists, Smith attributing it to the bond in the squad. "We can't talk high enough of it, it's such a big deal with the team connection and it is such a genuine connection between the group," Smith said.

The day Canberra's David slew Goliath to create baseball history

David Polkinghorne

IT'S one of the greatest David and Goliath stories in Australian sport. But it probably doesn't get the credit it deserves.

Ten years on, the Canberra Cavalry are still reigning Asia Series champions having claimed the title in Taiwan in 2013 - the last time the series was held.

A team of "minor leaguers and public servants" came together to produce one of the biggest upsets in baseball history - pitting the then ABL champions against teams from Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Italy.

The Cavalry boasted a payroll of just $47,000 - dwarfed by the $23.5 million Japanese giants Tohoku Golden Eagles spent per season.

Despite the massive gap in finances, it was the Cavalry who came away with the series win - thrashing the hometown Uni-President Lions 14-4 in the final.

The win was sealed when Canberra catcher Jack Murphy hit a bases-loaded home run in the eighth inning and the party began.

But the Cavalry didn't get long to celebrate their historic win - they were on a bus to the airport a few hours later.

Monday will mark the 10-year anniversary of the historic victory - a win former Cavalry pitcher Brian Greeting felt didn't get the credit it deserved.

Not only was it the first - and only - time an ABL team had won the Asia Series it was the first time they'd even won a game at the tournament.

Then-ABL operations manager Ben Foster described simply making the final as on a par with Australia's 2004 Olympic silver medal.

"Sadly it's probably down the list in Australian baseball achievements. I don't know why - it's actually such a big deal," Greeting said.

"What went down was actually pretty miraculous. It's hard to explain to somebody outside the baseball realm how awesome that was."

"In my personal achievements? I don't think like that. I was more happy to be a part of the team - the team was really memorable."

Coincidentally, Greeting had been in Taiwan in the months before the Asia Series win - the Californian had signed with Taiwan's Brother Elephants team in the Australian winter.

It was part of Greeting's endless summer that mostly saw him travelling back and forth from Canberra to the USA playing baseball.

Now he's settled in the capital with his young family and working as an ACT firefighter.

While most people had written the Cavalry off before they'd even thrown a pitch, Grening's time in Taiwan had him confident they could come away with the $640,000 prize money - especially with the "special group" led by the likes of Murphy.

"I had just been in Taiwan playing and then I was back there a month later with this [Cavalry] team and I remember thinking, 'We can beat all these guys'," Grening said.

"I don't know why the ABL's had such a poor history of performance in this tournament because from my angle we're going to beat up on these guys.

That Asia Series win and ABL season helped launched Jon Berti's career.

He's spent the past six years playing Major League Baseball - initially for the Toronto Blue Jays, but more recently for the Miami Marlins.

Then Cavalry manager Michael Collins has gone on to win the World Series with the Houston Astros as their bullpen catcher.

Canberra also had the oldest player in the tournament - 40-year-old Michael Wells.

Wells produced crucial hits throughout the series and even rated a mention in one of the Taiwanese newspapers.

"One of the translators gave me a newspaper article after the first day - I think it translated as 'living dragon', 40-year-old living dragon or something," he said.

"I didn't know what it meant until I came back here and my wife had a friend who spoke the language and translated the article for me. It was a little funny."

ABL Cubs star comes Down Under

Cavalry lands $6m man to launch its new ABL campaign

David Polkinghorne

HE'S Canberra's new $6 million man. Not a bad pay day to start your sporting career with.

Canberra Cavalry recruit Ed Howard's sign-on fee for Major League Baseball team Chicago Cubs was US$3.75 million - equivalent to $6 million.

But with that sort of money comes pressure - although Howard didn't see it as a bad thing. The humble 21-year-old felt pressure made the game more enjoyable.

A broken hip has impacted the start of Howard's young career, which was why he's found his way Down Under to get in some "winter baseball" to make up for lost time.

He'll get his first taste of the ABL when the Cavalry take on arch-rival Sydney Blue Sox at Blacktown on Friday night for the first of the four-game series.

Howard's just three years into his baseball journey after the Cubs took him at pick 16 in the first round of the 2020 MLB draft.

He's got a career batting average of .220 and has come to Canberra to hone his craft at the plate.

Howard will return to the USA after round six, with fellow Cubs prospect Scott McKeon replacing him on the Cavalry roster.

"I don't really think too much about pressure. Pressure is a good thing. It wouldn't be any fun if there wasn't any pressure behind it, honestly," he said.

"I take whatever comes with it. That signing bonus as a high schooler that's a blessing. It's just my hard work paying off.

"It's more hard work to be done ... I take that [bonus], I'm thankful for it, but I still have to work. I've got a ways to go so that's what I'm focused on."

A freak injury has slowed down the start of his Cubs career, breaking his hip attempting to get to first base.

He tried to dodge a tag and fell awkwardly - ending his 2022 campaign in May.

It took a year for Howard to get back on the ballpark, but he's put the injury behind him.

He's liked what he's seen of Canberra since arriving two weeks ago and had a good feeling about the squad's chances of pushing for the championship.

Ed Howard. Picture by Gary Ramage

"It was a hip fracture. It took a year of rehab so I came back, started playing 'ball 12 months later,'" Howard said.

"I feel good, blessed to put that behind me. Of course the rehab process is not a fun time, it's hard work, and now I'm back on the field so I'm blessed to be back healthy.

"I was running down the first-base line, I tried to dodge a tag, kind of jumped out of the way, landed on the hip wrong and ended up fracturing it. It was just a freak accident."

Cavalry manager Keith Ward predicted Howard would be one of the best shortstops in the ABL.

Ward was equally happy with the squad he's assembled, with the pitching set to be a "real strength" of the squad.

He'll start with Kodai Hamaya in the season opener, with Mark Moclair, Kevin McGovern and Won Bin Hong rounding out the starting rotation.

"From what we've seen of [Ed] so far he's going to be a very handy pick-up for us - both offensively, but particularly defensively," Ward said.

"Very, very good shortstop even though he's only 21 years of age.

"We're excited to have him because the sky's the limit for him and he understands that he's on a journey that a lot of people don't get the opportunity to experience."

AIS aims for gender equity in coaching by 2032 Olympics

COACHING

Joanna Guelas

WHEN Sandy Brondello retired from basketball she knew she wanted to coach but just didn't know where to start.

Retiring in 2004 after 17 years on the Australian women's basketball team, Brondello's coaching career began when WNBA San Antonio coach Dan Hughes opened the door for her.

Now at the helm of the Opals and New York Liberty in the WNBA, Brondello is one of three women coaches in the top 36 high-performance sports in the nation.

"I was lucky. It's not as easy for other women," Brondello told AAP.

"They don't get the opportunities that I did from the start.

"In sport, men are hiring their buddies and you can't be something that you don't see."

Consulting over 70 sporting organisations, the Australian Institute of Sport has produced an action plan in a bid to tackle underrepresentation of women in high-performance coaching roles.

Led by Michelle De Highden, the research found women coaches often leave the sports system due to inadequate recruitment and pathways, negative work cultures and lack of parental support.

"When I did take over my first head coaching job, I was pregnant and had a baby in the season," Brondello said.

"I had eight days off and then came back and worked because I wanted to. Women are just as career-oriented as men so why aren't we given the opportunity to be coaches just because we are mothers? Being a mother makes us better coaches because we learn about balance, discipline and sacrifice. We've got to support them so that we're not losing them because they don't think it's possible."

Australian women's cricket coach Shelley Nitschke also got her start as a coach thanks to the support of her male colleagues.

Retiring from international cricket in 2011, Nitschke spent a few years out of the sport before returning to a development role.

"There's been a number of women I've seen coming into coaching and have really good skills but for one reason or another just fall out of it," Nitschke told AAP.

"When I was coming through, there weren't a lot of full-time roles available. That can be a real barrier because you've also got to earn a living so sometimes coaching just doesn't fit. Your self-confidence can be a barrier as well - thinking that you're not good enough or you're not right for the role.

"I had male champions always around me but I know that's not the case for everyone. Having women in coaching roles just makes programs better and improve quicker because there are different ways of looking at things."

As part of a larger strategy building towards the 2032 Brisbane Olympics, the AIS will develop a pool of talented women and form a national network of coaching development facilitators.

Kerr nets in Europe as Chelsea 'robbed'

Soccer: Sam Kerr's Chelsea kicked off its Champions League group stage campaign with a controversial 2-2 draw against Hayley Raso's Real Madrid. The Matildas captain headed home from close range in the 74th minute in a bumper opening Group D clash in the Spanish capital, while her Aussie teammate Raso only entered the contest in the 89th. A day after confirming she was leaving the Blues to take over as the US women's national team coach, Emma Hayes was left feeling "robbed" when her side had a last-kick winner ruled out.

White time as Celtics down 76ers

Basketball: Derrick White scored 14 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter to lead the Boston Celtics to a 117-107 win over the Philadelphia 76ers in a matchup of the early pacesetters in the NBA's Eastern Conference. Jayson Tatum scored a game-high 29 points and Jrue Holiday added 18 points, 10 rebounds and three assists for the Celtics (9-2), who were missing Jaylen Brown (non-COVID illness) and Kristaps Porzingis (right knee contusion). "Everyone has to step it up a little bit," said White, who was 7 of 12 from the floor.

Canberra United the A-League's whipping boy

Melanie Dinjaski

WHAT did Canberra United do to deserve this? The club has copped more than a few unfair calls in recent seasons, and the 2023-24 A-League campaign is following that trend with their latest setback cementing the club as the competition's whipping boy.

Remember just last season when Canberra were wrongfully docked three points at a crucial time over an incorrect substitution breach decision which forced them to appeal the later overturned call?

Or when this season's Unite Round was announced and saw Canberra lose a home game for the Sydney-based soccer festival?

This week the licks kept coming as it was confirmed United's round five game against the Wanderers on Saturday had been postponed to January, and then on Thursday the date changed to March 13 in Sydney.

The news came a week after Canberra's round four clash against Sydney FC was also postponed at short notice because of the Sky Blues' AFC Women's Club Championship game in Uzbekistan.

The Wanderers had announced a fortnight ago that their original fixture hosted in Bathurst couldn't be played there due to weather impacting the pitch preparation.

In those two weeks, neither the Wanderers or the Australian Professional Leagues that run the A-League Women could find a suitable replacement ground in Sydney - a large city filled with rectangular grounds - due to "scheduled turf renovation periods".

"It is imperative that we have fit-for-purpose venues for all A-League Women games," the APL said in a statement.

The result is that United now won't play until next Sunday November 26, when they host the Newcastle Jets at McKellar Park.

The rescheduled Wanderers and Sydney FC games mean United also have to face a monster January and March with five matches in each month.

It's something that simply would not happen in the A-League Men, and just months after the biggest Women's World Cup, it makes the nation's top domestic women's competition look amateur.

Instead of competing in their fifth match this weekend and working up some form, United have had a disruptive month and a half with only three games played.

Canberra fans would rightly be feeling like their team are the league's punching bag right now, and it tends to hit a nerve in these parts after what other codes have experienced too - lest they forget the NRL's infamous desire for the Raiders to "wither on the vine" and collapse.

Parallel to this debacle, it certainly doesn't help that repeated setbacks are hurting Canberra United - currently run by the chief executive-less Capital Football - just as the APL are trying to sell an A-League Men licence to new owners. The way United has been treated, you wouldn't blame investors for getting cold feet if this is going to be the norm.

Fiery clash about language in sport

SOCCER

Melanie Dinjaski

FORMER Capital Football chief executive Heather Reid has sparked a fiery debate about language in sport after clashing on social media with Matildas great Lisa De Vanna.

Reid is renowned as a champion for women's sport, and particularly soccer, pushing for equality in every role she's held as an administrator.

However her response to a tweet about Bayern Munich signing Adelaide United's teenage striker Nestory Irankunda drew some criticism.

A journalist calling Irankunda the "next big thing in Australia football", led to Reid replying on Twitter: "Bigger than Kerr or other Matildas or just next big thing in 'men's football'?"

Retired Matildas striker De Vanna, who played at four World Cups, won the 2010 Asian Cup and claimed four A-League championships with four different clubs, took issue with Reid.

"Does it really matter?" De Vanna, a former United player herself, said.

"Yep, language matters, especially when it comes to gender #CorrectTheInternet," Reid replied.

But De Vanna, who is the third-highest capped Matilda and was only recently overtaken by Sam Kerr as the Matildas' leading goal-scorer, was not impressed.

"Heather come on stop trying to hijack the narrative. Football we are all one and football is for everyone. Who give a shit if you have a dick or fanny. How's that for language!" she said.

The exchange came a week after the conversation about language in sport sparked up again in cricket over legendary former Australian women's skipper Belinda Clark.

It was pointed out Glenn Maxwell's iconic 201 not-out at the Cricket World Cup against Afghanistan was incorrectly being promoted as the highest score by an Australian in a one-day international, while Clark had actually scored 229 against Denmark back in 1997.

In 2017 at Wimbledon Andy Murray also corrected journalists who said Sam Querrey was the "first US player" to reach a grand slam semi since 2009, ignoring several female Americans who had achieved the feat.

Kyrgios left waiting for 'stars to align' for court comeback

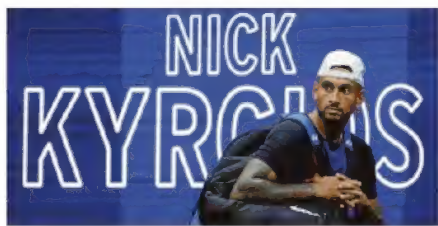

TENNIS

Darren Walton

CANBERRA star Nick Kyrgios concedes "the stars have to align a little bit" for the him to make a successful comeback after more than a year out of professional tennis.

While the 2022 Wimbledon finalist maintains he's hungry for a return, Kyrgios is now unranked after being sidelined since September last year with knee and wrist issues.

required knee surgery in January and then aborted comeback plans at Wimbledon after tearing a ligament in his right wrist.

He said last week it would be almost a month before he could remove a splint from his serving forearm and Thursday's candid revelation of needing some luck will come as a major blow to his fans.

Commentating on the ATP Finals in Italy, Kyrgios remained optimistic he could emulate Alexander Zverev, the former world No.2 who is back in the top 10 after shattering an ankle at last year's French Open.

"The stars have to align a little bit," Kyrgios told the Tennis Channel.

"And with Zverev, he's an incredibly hard worker. That's his reputation. He ticks all the boxes and, if someone like that can come back from an injury like that, I think that's what I have to draw inspiration from, for sure."

maiden grand slam final at the All England Club, Kyrgios also advanced to the US Open quarter-finals for the first time last year.

The 28-year-old said his stellar 2022 season was the driving force behind his desire to make a successful return.

"After last year, I had such a great year and I'm so hungry to get back out there," Kyrgios said.

"So I'm doing everything I can to get back out there... just doing the rehab, doing the gym work."

Which ACT stars could cross codes?

IMAGINE Corey Toole racing Josh Ado-Carr to the line or Rob Valetini charging straight at Payne Haas.

NRL chief executive Andrew Abdo has opened the door for clubs to launch raids on rugby's best talent, with rugby league bosses to discuss salary cap exemptions to attract players from rival codes.

If the Canberra Raiders want to target any of rugby's brightest talents, they might not have to look too far.

Toole - the ACT Brumbies winger who once asked Google how to run faster - is one of the quickest Australian athletes across any football code. You'd be mad not to have a look, although blink and you might miss him.

Valetini is one of the most damaging forwards in world rugby. Imagine having his 193 centimetre, 113 kilogram frame joining Joe Tapine in the Raiders' pack.

Brumbies flyhalf Noah Lolesio could soon explore his options for 2025 and beyond. A code switch might be just what the doctor ordered for the playmaker discarded by the Wallabies - if you can convince him to stay instead of flying to France.

Scrumhalf Ryan Loneragan could feed him the ball from hooker, while Wallabies centre Len Ikitau - a strong defender with incredible footwork - could play outside him.

Before we get too carried away, Raiders chief executive Don Furner has no plans to target rugby stars and says any salary cap relief should reward clubs for producing their own juniors.

Across town, at this stage the Brumbies are not concerned about the prospect of their biggest names crossing codes.

But Rugby Australia officials are on high alert with chief executive Phil Waugh saying the governing body needs to win back the faith of the players.

"We talk about building trust and connection. We've lost a lot of trust with the playing group as well," Waugh said.

"The experience that they had this year with the Wallabies at the World Cup, compared to what they would have envisaged going into the World Cup, might have been very different. So it's really important for us to build a system that's attractive for them to be a part of."

THE SOUTHPAW PROJECT

Remember The Southpaw Project?

A documentary following Canberra cricketer Blake Dean has been in the works for seven years, and the final minutes of footage were shot this week.

The project is led by Lachlan Ross - who, alongside Ben Izzard, was behind a four-part series on Luc Longley, the Australian giant who played alongside Michael Jordan and co during the Bulls' second three-peat, titled Foundations.

Dean was initially chasing a return to the Big Bash - this time as a left-hander - in a bid to become an ambidextrous cricketer at the elite level. A BBL deal would never come, but Ross hopes the documentary's new direction transcends cricket.

"It's a rare and special thing to be trusted with access to someone's life for seven years," Ross said.

"I think the most incredible part of this has been seeing Blake's perspective and sense of self change over that time.

"The Southpaw Project evolved from a sports story documenting something that had never been accomplished on a cricket pitch to a film that explores mental health, becoming a father, and transitioning from professional sport into something bigger.

"In 2016, Blake set out to change the game of cricket, and in seven years he has done that in ways he never would have imagined."

TOOTS' TESTIMONIAL

Ever wanted to spend an afternoon spinning yarns with Jarrod Croker?

Plenty will get the chance to do just that when the Canberra Raiders great is honoured with a testimonial at Thoroughbred Park on December 1.

Tickets are going for $300 a pop - or $3000 for a table - for an event dubbed "Toasting a Legend", but billed on social media as "Roasting a Legend".

A LONG WEEKEND AT HOME

You might want to skip the coast on the Anzac Day long weekend in April.

With the Greater Western Sydney Giants set to host the Brisbane Lions in an Anzac Day blockbuster at Manuka Oval on April 25, Canberra fans are set for a triple-header weekend.

The Brumbies will host the Wellington Hurricanes in a Super Rugby clash at Canberra Stadium on the Saturday afternoon, before the Raiders face the Cronulla Sharks a day later.

A Thursday night game followed by two afternoons at the football doesn't sound like the worst way to spend a few days in Canberra - just as we're supposed to turn the heaters on.

Why police review into Wighton-Mitchell arrest should be public ACT Policing refuses to confirm whether they will publicly release findings from an internal investigation into the arrest of Jack Wighton and Latrell Mitchell, sparking major concerns about its validity. Police have begun an internal investigation of police officers who arrested the NRL stars earlier this year after the charges were dismissed in court. The AFP executive have referred the entire matter to a professional standards team, which investigates serious misconduct and corruption matters.

The Canberra Times asked if the full review will be made public, before getting the following three dot point response from the AFP:

■ The AFP is aware of current media reporting regarding the Mitchell-Wighton matter.

■ This matter is being assessed by AFP Professional Standards.

■ No further comment will be made at this stage.

It is little wonder why Mitchell's barrister believes no meaningful change will come from the review into the failed case, which Mitchell has labelled a "traumatic experience".

"I have not the slightest faith that any internal police investigation will identify or root out the problems with ACT Policing which the Mitchell and Wighton case has highlighted," barrister Jack Pappas said. The soon-to-be South Sydney teammates were charged in February for a scuffle outside a Canberra nightclub during celebrations for Wighton's birthday. The pair had charges dismissed in the ACT Magistrates Court after one of the police officers involved, Sergeant David Power, gave "false evidence".

"What I saw appears to have not happened and my memory has failed me," Power said. That's not good enough from anyone, let alone someone in a position of power. The findings of the investigation should hold those in question to account.

Larkham would help RA

RUGBY UNION

Caden Helmers

STEPHEN Larkham says he wants to help Australian rugby bounce back but the Wallabies great was coy when asked if he wanted to fill the void left by Eddie Jones.

The ACT Brumbies coach is viewed as one of the leading contenders to take the Wallabies coaching role vacated by Jones just 10 months into a five-year deal.

Rugby Australia bosses are searching for a successor but Larkham danced around questions when pressed about his desire to take the role for a national team reeling after its earliest World Cup exit.

"I'm certainly interested in trying to help rugby in Australia. We've got a real philosophy here to make sure we are growing the game as an organisation," Larkham said.

"However I can help in terms of improving our results and improving our growth within the sporting arena, I'd love to be involved."

When asked whether he had spoken to RA officials about the Wallabies job, Larkham said: "Rugby Australia have got a fair bit on at the moment. I'm very focused here on my job with the Brumbies."

Larkham was the Wallabies' attack coach between 2015 and 2019, before a three-year stint with Munster in Ireland.

He returned to the Brumbies ahead of the 2023 Super Rugby season and led the club to a semi-final appearance, with the ACT again staking their claim as the best Australian team in the competition.

Brumbies officials will not stand in Larkham's way should he wish to pursue the Wallabies coaching role.

since Super Rugby finished.

"There's been a really good planning period here with the coaches. We're looking to go one better from last year.

"Semi-finals is a pretty good result for most teams, but we want to make sure we're competing in that final game of the year. I've been heavily focused here on this program."

Former Brumbies coach and ex-Wallabies assistant Dan McKellar is among the candidates being discussed for the Australian job, with an exit clause in his contract at Leicester opening the door for a return home.

McKellar was a part of Dave Rennie's Wallabies staff before leaving to join Leicester earlier this year, having been blindsided by Rennie's axing.

Other names floated in discussions are ex-Wallabies coach Michael Cheika, former Brumbies and Connacht coach Andy Friend, and ex-All Blacks mentor Ian Foster.
